140 die, many homes hit by Japan typhoon

TOKYO, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — A powerful typhoon blew out into the sea off Okhotsk late Sunday leaving 140 dead, 19 missing and 14 others injured, according to the national police agency.

The most powerful to hit Japan's industrial heartland in two years, the typhoon left nearly 14,000 homeless. The typhoon, with winds up to 126 kms an hour, brought more than 8.5 inches of rain to many areas, weathermen said. The rains triggered more than 230 landslides and disrupted roads at nearly 300 places.

Usually peaceful rivers turned into roaring flows of muddy water, bursting their banks and causing flooding. Police said 86 bridges were swept away by swollen rivers and floodwaters inundated more than 3,000 houses and covered very vast areas of farm land.

Typhoon Thad, the worst to strike Japan's industrial heartland, also used widespread disruption to land, sea and air traffic. Though the typhoon skirted Tokyo itself, many international flights had to be diverted from Tokyo's international airport at Narita to airports in the south. Winds gusted up to 126 kms per hour. At least seven persons died earlier this month when Typhoon Phyllis struck northern Japan.

CARS SOAKED: Cars are soaked at riverside after the Tama River overflowed its banks in a torrential rain brought by Typhoon Thad that hit the shores of Japan's central main island of Honshu Sunday.

King receives Hassan Gouled

TAIF, Aug. 23 (SPA) — Djibouti President Hassan Gouled arrived here Sunday and was welcomed by King Khaled. Second Deputy Premier and Commander of the National Guard Prince Abdullah, Defense and Aviation Minister Prince Sultan, Deputy Commander of the National Guard Prince Badr and Deputy Makkah Governor Prince Saud bin Abdul Momen also were among the welcoming party.

President Gouled is accompanied by a delegation which includes Foreign and Cooperatives Minister Mamoun Faleh, Industry Minister Fahm Al-Hajj, Ambassador to the Kingdom Aden Sheikh Hassan.

Khaled, Qaddafi exchange cables

TAIF, Aug. 23 (SPA) — Libyan President Muammar Qaddafi sent a cable to King Khaled while crossing Saudi Arabian air space Sunday.

In the cable, he said: "On crossing Saudi Arabia's air space, I salute you personally and wish you health and well-being."

Replying, the King said: "We appreciate your best wishes expressed during your overflight through the Kingdom's air space, and we wish you health and happiness."

Falcons to scare airports birds

PARIS, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The French Defense Ministry has revealed a top secret — air force jet bombers and fighters have a vital new ally to keep away dangerous enemies. The ally is the falcon. The enemy — flocks of birds swarming over the tarmac.

Falcons are being provided at military airports to ward off the birds which can get

Aden pact sets defense council

BEIRUT, Aug. 23 (R) — Libya, Ethiopia and South Yemen have agreed to establish a joint defense council to coordinate military cooperation between the three, according to a magazine report Sunday.

The pro-Libyan weekly Al-Moukif Al-Arabi said this was decided at last week's summit in Aden of the leaders of the three countries, who signed a treaty of "friendship and cooperation." The meeting inaugurated a suspicious pro-Moscow alliance designed to challenge the region.

Few details of what had been agreed at the meeting had emerged. But Al-Moukif Al-Arabi published what it said were the main points. It said they had decided on "military coordination in all fields to combat activity by imperialist and Zionists."

The defense ministers of the three countries would meet at a military council for the alliance, the magazine added. Ethiopia is the biggest military power of the three states, with 230,000 men in its armed forces. Libya has 53,000 men and South Yemen 24,000 men under arms, according to the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies.

The magazine quoted sources close to the pact as saying Libya would grant Ethiopia a loan of $480 million to help its development projects. The three states had agreed on their support for the Palestinian cause and their rejection of American military bases in the Horn of Africa, the Arabian peninsula and North Africa, the magazine added.

sucked into a jet engine, causing a single-engine fighter to crash costing millions of dollars. Last January, military jets at Istax, near Marseilles and Entzheim, near Strasbourg, eastern France, started training falcons and other birds of prey. Other methods, including sonar devices giving piercing shrieks of birds in distress, had been tried in the past, but without success.

U.N. urges help 31 poor nations to confer

By Chris Angelo

UNITED NATIONS, Aug. 23 (AP) — At the bottom of the international economic order is a cluster of countries that have little but hope.

They are the 31 nations the United Nations has classified as the least developed countries, the poorest and weakest in the world. Their hopes now turn to Paris, where their plight will be the subject of a U.N. conference from Sept. 1-14.

The poor states are as far-flung and diverse as Bhutan, perched high in the Himalayas, and the Polynesian islands of Samoa, as politically prominent as Laos and Afghanistan. Two-thirds are in Africa, 15 are landlocked and four are islands.

"Most of these countries are really faced with monumental difficulties a matter of survival, a matter of straggle," Alfred Haemmerli, a U.N. development program policy adviser, said in a recent interview. "They literally have nothing. They're totally dependent on the vagaries of weather, the vagaries of international commodity prices for the few products they can sell abroad. They have every conceivable health problem, population, high inflation, not to speak of in many instances, unstable governments which probably are caused in part by these (other problems)."

In U.N. terms, an LDC is distinguished by little number: A per capita gross domestic product of $300 or less, manufacturing making up no more than 10 percent of production, and a literacy rate no higher than 20 percent. While the numbers are uniform, the symptoms vary widely.

In Uganda, farmers have faced a shortage of bees, their main tool, an Ugandan diplomat said. He said the whole factory was unable to import spare parts because of the economic shambles left by the previous regime.

In Upper Volta, some of the most fertile agricultural land lies fallow because the area is infested by the blackfly, which transmits river blindness, according to the U.N. Development Program. The disease affects more than one million people in seven countries of the Volta River Basin and has blinded some 70,000 people. A UNDP spraying project has controlled the disease in some areas, but the costly spraying must continue indefinitely.

In North Yemen, a baby girl who survives her first year can expect to live a little more than 35 years, a boy 38. Only about one out of 10 persons can read and write. More than four out of five persons in these poorest nations — where 259 million people live — depend on agriculture for a living. Coffee made up a third of their exports in 1977, the last year for which statistics are available, and cotton about 15 percent.

No specific financial commitments are expected to emerge from the Paris conference and a fund is expected to be created. What the countries hope for is agreement on development targets, and commitments on the type and conditions for aid, which they hope will increase. A draft program has been drawn up in preliminary meetings for the conference, which includes all U.N. members.

The LDC estimate their foreign aid needs at $12.3 billion a year for 1981-85, $44.4 per capita. That compares with $6.7 billion for 1975-79. However, donor countries are tending to slow up rather than increase foreign aid and officials admit this is not the most opportune moment for the conference.

Offers to mediate

U.S. air safety lacking -- IFATCA

SCHIPOL, Netherlands, Aug. 23 (R) — Leaders of the world's air traffic controllers expressed concern about the safety of the U.S. airspace, but announced no action in support of the striking U.S. controllers at the end of the two-day meeting here Sunday.

The International Federation of Air Traffic Controller Associations (IFATCA) accused the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) and the Airline Pilots Association (ALPA) of issuing statements on the safety of U.S. airspace which were "calculated to mislead the public and supported by incomplete statistics."

But IFATCA President Harri Henschler refused to disclose whether any action had been agreed and told a press conference: "The federation has decided to give solid support to the reopening of discussions with the U.S. administration (by the U.S. controllers). But it would not be in the interests of a negotiated settlement to publish... details of any contemplated or agreed action at this time. Asked if this meant there would be no action in support of the strike, Henschler said: "Our members are autonomous and might act individually."

Robert Meyer, executive vice-president of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO), which represents the U.S. strikers, said he was pleased with the outcome of the meeting. Henschler said IFATCA was releasing details of reported incidents and near misses to back its claim that the U.S. system as currently operated is unsafe. He said the federation had no plans for a further meeting, but could call one at short notice.

He added that IFATCA was offering its services to the Reagan administration and PATCO as mediators and negotiators. A similar offer by the IFATCA Executive board 10 days ago was rejected by President Reagan. Reagan sacked 12,000 PATCO members after their pay strike began on Aug. 3 and since then the system has been operated by substitute personnel. The stoppage has cut U.S. domestic flights by a quarter.

The strong tone of the IFATCA statement was influenced by documents produced by

U.S. warns Israel on AWACS issue

TEL AVIV, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The United States has warned Israel against political opposition to the sale of U.S. "AWACS" (Airborne Warning and Control Systems) radar planes to Saudi Arabia, but has also moved to quell Israeli suspicion of the sale. It was reported here Sunday.

Israeli radio reported a warning given to Premier Menahem Begin that political opposition to the sale of the planes would be regarded as a personal offense by U.S. President Ronald Reagan. The radio said the warning had been conveyed by U.S. presidential adviser Jacob Stein on a recent visit to Israel. He told the premier that the decision to go ahead with the sale had been taken personally by Reagan and was "unshakable." The radio added, however, that Begin's position remained fixed.

Meanwhile, the Washington correspondent of the evening daily Yedioth Aharanot reported Sunday that Israeli armed forces chief Raphael Eytan would visit the U.S. soon at the invitation of the Pentagon.

Meyer which indicated that some American pilots were concerned at safety standards despite assurances from ALPA.

Among these were ALPA documents and a report from an independent aviation institute, both of which indicated a higher incidence of system's errors and near misses in U.S. airspace since the start of the strike. They also included a copy of a letter to ALPA President John O'Donnell from the chairman of ALPA's air traffic control committee which Meyer said had been leaked to PATCO.

The letter, dated Aug. 10, one week after the strike began, expressed concern at trends indicating a decreasing level of safety in the U.S. and concluded: "The air traffic control committee (of ALPA) recommend that there should be no increase in total operations in the current modified system until it can be shown that the present workforce can sustain the present level of operations safely and efficiently over a prolonged period of time."

IFATCA's criticism of "misleading" statements from the airline pilots associations referred to comments such as that by ALPA President John O'Donnell, said last week that American air travel was no longer as, or safer than, it was before the strike began. Meyer said such statements were based on financial considerations. "If they don't fly, they don't get paid," he said. Describing the pilots' attitude, he said: "It's life going downhill in a car knowing that the brakes might fail — we haven't died yet, but we may."

Representatives IFATCA Saturday began a two-day session of emergency talks on the U.S. dispute. More than half the operation's 61 member associations are attending. Federation president said no decision had been taken at Saturday's talks on any action to support striking U.S. controllers.

IFATCA sources, meanwhile, have predicted that national controllers' associations would be asked to tell their governments they believe there is an accident risk in U.S. airspace during the present substitute controlling system. Many European controllers, like their U.S. colleagues, are civil servants and forbidden to strike. For this reason IFATCA believes it would be of help to the American controllers if members convinced their employers that U.S. airspace is unsafe.

Independent aviation consultant Richard Weston, an adviser to IFATCA, told Reuters he was convinced air traffic controllers were right when they said U.S. airspace was unsafe.

Dogmeat ban urged by Indonesians

JAKARTA, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Indonesian Muslims are pressing for a ban on the growing consumption of dogmeat, which is forbidden by Islam.

A thriving demand for dogmeat has sent prices soaring in several towns. At Lumajang in East Java, for example, a dog recently fetched $8 — twice the going price a few weeks before, it was reported Sunday.

The Jakarta Muslim daily Pelita called on Islamic leaders to probe the dogmeat trade and wondered whether there should be "a decree strictly banning the trade in this harmful stuff." It added: "In this country with the largest Muslim population in the world, the dogmeat business does not make sense, and it is against Islamic teaching."

Fahd Mideast plan gets further support

Aug. 23 (SPA) — Senegal and other African states have announced support for King Fahd's plan for a just and comprehensive settlement in the Middle East.

Foreign Minister Mustapha Niasse arrived here Saturday, described a comprehensive eight-point plan as "constructive" and a step towards a comprehensive settlement in the region and an independent Palestinian state in its own land. This is the objective all Islamic countries aspire for, he said.

He arrived here Saturday to preside over a meeting of Senegalese ambassadors to the Arab world to discuss political, economic and cultural cooperation with Arab countries.

It is not the least surprising that this initiative was initiated from the Kingdom. The framework of its permanent and comprehensive quest for bringing about peace in the Arab region, but all parts of the Arab nation, Niasse said.

Niasse added that Senegal has supported Arab and Islamic causes and that it has historic ties with the Arabs. It is imperative to stand by the Palestinian people in their struggle to recover holy Jerusalem, he said.

He added that his country was tied with special relations with the Kingdom through which constant cooperation in all fields has been maintained. The Senegalese official said that the holding of the ambassadors' meeting here was indicative of this act.

Meanwhile, Indonesian Ambassador to the Kingdom Tekno Hadi Taye announced Sunday his country's support for Prince Fahd's plan. "Indonesia supports this proposal and stands in line with the Kingdom for reaching a peaceful, just and comprehensive settlement," the ambassador said.

He described the proposal as "the basic points, realistic and bold," stemming from the basic concepts of real peace. The ambassador reiterated the need for Islamic solidarity to form a united Arab-Islamic front against "our usurped rights."

In his message, the King expressed best wishes for the health and happiness of the Romanian leader and continued progress and success for the friendly people of Romania.

Jeddah clinic appoints health chief

By Alan Kenney

JEDDAH, Aug. 23 — New Jeddah Clinic Dr. Hamad M. Mutabagani announced the appointment of Alan E. Perkins as hospital administrator. Dr. Mutabagani said the appointment is part of the overall plan for bringing further the quality of the hospital's services.

Perkins is a British citizen trained in British medicine and a graduate in theology from London. He had additional hospital administrator in the United States and is a member of the American Hospital Association.

In the Kingdom, Perkins worked as a consultant and project director for Scientific American Health Facilities for several years and planning for the opening of King Faisal Specialist Hospital in Jeddah. During the last five years, the administrator has worked in private consulting health care in various parts of the Kingdom.

Perkins told Arab News that he returned to Saudi Arabia to work in the private medical sector because of the development possibilities in Saudi Arabia is the most exciting in any country in the world today; it has presented results not seen in any other country in such a short time span," he added.

The New Jeddah Clinic administrator said that ever since King Faisal presented plans for greatly enlarging medical services in the country, Saudi Arabia has been able to pull itself upward and achieve that goal.

"Development of all (health) schemes has become not only conceptual, but a reality," he added.

Toe Islamic architecture, Sattam urges

RIYADH, Aug. 23 (SPA) — Riyadh Deputy Governor Prince Sattam opened the Islamic Towns Organization's administrative board meeting here Saturday. The session is attended by representatives of the ITO general secretary and the municipalities of Makkah, Riyadh, Jerusalem, Baghdad, Ankara, Oman, Kuala Lumpur, Rabat, Islamabad and Conakry.

In his opening speech, Prince Sattam reiterated the Kingdom's support for the ITO. He called for the preservation of Islamic architecture in the development of Islamic cities and not to change their unique features.

Sayed Ali, Islamabad mayor, addressed the meeting and thanked Saudi Arabia for its assistance to the organization.

Among the speakers was also Makkah Mayor Abdul Kader Koshak, secretary general of the ITO, who outlined the organization's target. The ITO is an organization which seeks to group the activities of Islamic capitals and cities for the achievement of solidarity and coordination among them.

Prince Sattam

One of the organization's major objectives is to strengthen relations among Islamic cities and preserve the traditional Islamic architectural heritage. It also works to exchange expertise and benefit from each others' experience.

Riyadh Mayor Abdullah Al-Aly Al-Nuaim said that the delegates' presence in Riyadh is an opportunity to inspect the progress it is undergoing.

The meetings will last three days.

SR400m company formed for agricultural development

TAIF, Aug. 23 (SPA) — Agriculture and Water Minister Dr. Abdul Rahman Al-Sheikh said Sunday that a royal decree approving the formation of the National Agricultural Development Company has been issued Aug. 17. The Council of Ministers had licensed the company last month.

The company, a Saudi Arabian Share holding company, is established with an initial capital of SR400 million. The state contributed 20 percent of the capital and the rest has been allocated for public subscription.

The minister said that the company's creation comes in response to the Agriculture and Water Ministry's study of the agricultural situation in the Kingdom. The new company will give the agricultural sector a strong push toward the realization of the Kingdom's ambitions represented in its Third Five-Year Development Plan.

SR18m allotted to clean Makkah

MAKKAH, Aug. 23 — Crown Prince Fahd, Saturday approved an extra SR18 million for reinforcing the cleanliness campaign here and buying a number of vehicles and automatic machinery for the municipality.

As soon as the amount was allocated, contracts were immediately initiated with a number of firms to secure equipment before this year's pilgrimage rush, according to Al-Medina. A spokesman for the municipality said that Prince Fahd approved the proposal because, with its present facilities, the municipality of the holy city could not properly fulfill the tasks entrusted to it, especially at Mina during and after the pilgrimage.

Dr. Al-Sheikh added that the Haradh agricultural investment project will be the starting point for the new company. The project has made considerable profits during its first year after it was transformed from a government project to a commercial one.

The agricultural development company will be a wide-ranging scheme, with the Haradh project as its start, to achieve large increase agricultural produce which will contribute to self-sufficiency in agricultural and animal production and their related products. This includes the manufacturing, marketing and storing needs, the minister said.

The company's board was to meet Monday morning for the first time since the company, has been officially established. The meeting, to be chaired by Dr. Al-Sheikh, will draw the company's future schemes and review procedures accomplished so far.

Plans afoot to build depot in Makkah for rail goods

TAIF, Aug. 23 (SPA) — The Government Railway Organization's proposal for establishing a railroad network linking the holy places to Jeddah includes a plan to build a depot in Makkah where goods would be transported from Jeddah Islamic port and go through customs at their destination, according to officials.

GRRO Director General Faisal Al-Shuhail said Sunday that the proposal also underlines the need to extend the network to Medina, thus not to be restricted between the holy places and Jeddah. He said that he expected implementation of the plan to begin during the Fourth Five-Year Development.

Shuhail was speaking after a meeting of the GRRO board meeting held here Sunday under Industry and Electricity Minister Dr. Ghazi AlGosaibi, the acting communications minister.

The meeting considered the issue of fees for transporting containers from Damman port to the Riyadh depot, Shuhail said. The board viewed that fees should be on reasonable limits so as not to burden consumers. At the same time, it should also be competitive with truck transportation rates, he added.

Some companies have already approached GRRO for transporting bulk cement from Damman to Riyadh by rail. Special fees have been endorsed in this connection, Shuhail said.

The third five-year plan included a comprehensive study for proposed railroad and its economic feasibility, he said. Priorities will be given according to the outcome of the study, he said in reply to a question on whether a line linking Riyadh to the Western Region is being considered.

The issue of linking the Kingdom to neighboring Arab countries by railroad network is under study too, Shuhail said. Kuwait had proposed to establish a line to link it with the Kingdom. However, GRRO officials replied that such a project would be more feasible if considered after Kuwait has been linked to Iraq through a railroad network, Shuhail added.

He denied that the Riyadh depot is suffering from congestion. "We have not faced any pressure so far, though activity in the depot has increased from handling 150 containers a month in the first month of its opening to 980 containers in the third month," Shuhail said. The depot has a capacity to handle about 2,000 containers a month, he added.

If any pressure is anticipated in the future, plans have been readied for additional lines including financial allocations, equipment and personnel, he concluded.

REDF gives grace to borrowers

TAIF, Aug. 23 (SPA) — The Ministry of Finance and National Economy said here Sunday that Crown Prince Fahd has given another opportunity to borrowers from the Real Estate Development Fund to regularize payment of loan instalments.

In a press statement, the ministry said that the Crown Prince has agreed that borrowers of loans from REDF for building houses for personal residence be given another chance to pay their dues. It said that 20 percent of the value of loan instalment will be exempted if payment is made within 60 days from the due date, instead of 30 days as is the case at present.

The statement said further that defaulters, who have not paid three or more instalments, have been given a grace period of six months, as from now, to pay all arrears, to entitle themselves to exemption on successive instalments provided they continue to make regular payment on time.

The statement urged all defaulters to benefit from the new arrangements.

COMMENT

By Muhammad Mahmood Hafez Al Nadwa

Turkey's President Kenan Evren's wise decision to make Islamic education compulsory at all levels of education in the country was carried by all Turkish media agencies but ignored by the Western press. The Turkish leader's move shows that the country is rectifying its educational pattern which was wronged by Mustafa Kamal in 1927, when he had abrogated Islamic education and prevented Arab teaching in schools and colleges in Turkey.

Mustafa Kamal's move had alienated Turkey from its glorious history and deep-rooted Islamic culture and civilization: It adopted Western life and education, which later jolted its spirit and destroyed its economy. The West gave it the taste of misery by refusing to welcome it in its group, as an eastern state with a western tinge.

After a lapse of several decades, Turkey has now returned to its historic course as a great oriental country which had contributed much to the building of the glorious history of Islam. A comeback to Islamic education will restore Turkey its original oriental character and will give what it has been missing for so many years. The friendly people of Turkey will now regain their lost spirit and command respect from their Muslim brethren in the world, because Turkey has enjoyed a high status in the eyes of the Islamic world. At the same time, every Muslim should keep in mind that every process of rectification and reconstruction is a serious and delicate matter and ought to be taken with a good measure of composure and prudence.

We congratulate Turkey for returning to its real oriental character and making Islamic education compulsory in its educational institutions.

Six Syrian troops killed in explosions

BEIRUT, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Three explosions ripped through buildings in the Lebanon town of Chitaura late Saturday night, killing six Syrian peacekeeping troops and injuring seven other persons, police officers said.

Chitaura, located 24 kms west of the Syrian border, serves as the regional headquarters for the peacekeeping troops in the Bekaa Valley, where Syria had deployed SAM-6 missiles last April during a showdown with Israel.

Police sources and the rightist "Voice of Lebanon" radio station said one blast occurred near the residence of the Syrian Force Commander Saad Bayraqdar, but it was not known if any injuries resulted from the explosion. The sources, who declined to be identified, said all three blasts occurred near the city's Park Hotel.

Beirut state radio also reported the blast but said only that a number of casualties had resulted.

The explosions came at a time of escalating tensions between the Syrian forces and Christian military led by the rightist Pbalangist Party. The two groups fought a fierce 10-week artillery and rocket war last spring that sparked the Syrian-Israeli missile tension.

Arab mediators negotiated a ceasefire that stopped the fighting last June 9 but the truce has been threatened by renewed clashes.

Lebanese observers have predicted an escalation of Syrian-Christian tensions in advance of a national reconciliation dialogue scheduled to be held by Arab League mediators early next month.

As executions continue

Bani-Sadr forms resistance groups

BEIRUT, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Exiled Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said in an interview published in Beirut today that he was organizing resistance groups for toppling Ayatollah Khomeini.

Bani-Sadr, who fled to Paris last month after being dismissed as president of the pro-English-language weekly Monday magazine that he was organizing resistance inside and outside Iran. He said he had led a commune calling for formation of a committee of resistance in each village and town to unify their efforts.

Bani-Sadr added: "If the present trend continues, the regime will not survive for long. I cannot say it will take one month or two months, but if this trend continues, I think it's a matter of months, no more."

The ex-president said the Iranian government "generates growing resistance by its inability to organize the economic, social, political and cultural life of the country, and the atrocities it is committing."

Bani-Sadr said more than 80 percent of the Iranians supported him. He said the Iranians say have less independence and freedom before the revolution. But he said he did not join forces with supporters of the Shah, and would not accept any help from the United States, Soviet Union or other foreign countries.

The former president said that if he were to return to Iran, "I would not promote secularism. I would promote an Islam which respects freedom and independence."

In a telephonic interview with Reuters in London, Iran's Ayatollah Sadeq Khalkbali, overheard the name "banging judge" after Iranian revolution, said he hoped there would be fewer executions of government opponents. Khalkbali said "the Republic will be an obstacle in its path. But I hope the number of executions will go down."

At least 500 persons are estimated to have died by firing squads since Bani-Sadr was deposed two months ago. Most have been members of the radical People's Mujahedin. Khalkbali said the Tehran authorities were winning the battle against opposition groups.

Meanwhile, Islamic Republic reported in Tehran Sunday that eight convicted thieves and another 15 opponents of the Iranian government have been executed in the past 48 hours. Six members of the Mujahedeen and the Marxist Leninist opposition group were shot by firing squad at Bojnurd in northeastern Iran after being accused of "corruption on earth and taking up arms against the republic," the paper said.

Another four Mujahedeen arrested after clashes in June between government forces and guerrillas loyal to Bani-Sadr were executed at Tabriz in the west of the country Friday and five others convicted of making petrol bombs and distributing propaganda of Bani-Sadr's National Resistance Council were executed at the northern towns of Babol and Gonbad on Saturday.

Speaking in an interview with British television network ITV, the French External Affairs Minister Claude Cheysson said Paris is concerned about a deterioration in relations with Iran.

Libya complains about U.S. action to nonaligned nations

MIAMI, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Libya has complained to Cuban President Fidel Castro, head of the nonaligned movement, that the United States committed an act of terrorism when U.S. Navy pilots shot down two Libyan jet fighters last week, Havana Radio reported Saturday. Libya wanted that the complaint be distributed to other member nations.

Col. Muammer Qaddafi sent a note to Castro calling the incident "a flagrant violation of the sovereignty of Libya, a challenge and a provocation that could endanger peace and international security." The broadcast, monitored in Miami, quoted Qaddafi's letter as saying, "The obvious intent of the attack was to create harassment and destabilize the Mediterranean Sea and the Gulf of Sidra, thus risking the security and peace of the region."

Five Afghan groups unite

PESHAWAR, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Five-Afghan fighter groups based in Pakistan have announced they had formed an alliance to fight against the Soviet presence in their country.

The announcement said Saturday they had formed a 50-member Majlis-i-Shooraa (advisory council) that would elect a leader of the alliance Sunday. The groups merged under (advice from about 300 Afghan mullahs (religious scholars) who crossed into

"Libya reserves its right to adopt whatever measures are necessary in order to preserve its legitimate right to its waters and territorial spaces."

"This act of international terrorism in the Mediterranean Sea has been committed by a member nation of the United Nations...against another member nation," Qaddafi said. "This is a situation that violates all norms and international rights recognized by the United Nations." He criticized U.S. naval maneuvers in the area as a "campaign of terrorism and provocation...against Libya."

In Addis Ababa, Qaddafi Saturday affirmed as a lie the United States claim that the shooting down of two Libyan aircraft by U.S. planes Wednesday was not in Libyan territorial waters. "This is a lie even worse than the act itself."

Pakistan five months ago, Afghan sources said. The sources said the mullahs told the groups that they would have no say in Afghanistan if they did not unite.

Saturday's announcement was made by the leader of the mullahs, Mian Out Sahibzada, and was signed by the heads of the five groups, Gaa Hezbe Islami, Jemaat Islami, Hartak-i-Inqilab, Hezbe Islami, and Khalis group and Jubba Nijajat-i-Mill.

Resistance sources said Mahaz-i-Millil led by Said Ahmad Gallani backed out of joining the alliance when the advisory council was formed with 10 members from each group. The sources said the alliance would try to bring fighters under one leadership and one flag for a more effective fight against the estimated 85,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

Israel moves 2nd minister to Arab Jerusalem

TEL AVIV, Aug. 23 (R) — A second Israeli minister has moved his office to Arab Jerusalem, government sources said.

They said Minister Without Portfolio Yitzhak Modai moved in Sunday to the justice ministry which has been in Arab Jerusalem.

Prime Minister Menahem Begin said last year he would move his office to Arab Jerusalem to demonstrate Israel's determination not to relinquish control over the city.

Modai Sunday moved into an office in a new government complex. A government spokesman said there were no immediate plans for Begin to move into the building.

Shehu Shagari urges OAU to dispatch troops to Chad

KHARTOUM, Aug. 23 (AP) — Nigerian President Shehu Shagari Saturday urged the Organization of African Unity to immediately dispatch a peacekeeping force into Chad to replace Libyan troops there.

In an interview with the Sudanese news agency Shagari said Libya would not have got the chance to enter Chad if the OAU had moved in quickly. "It is due to the faults of the OAU that this situation in Chad occurred," Shagari told Suna.

The Nigerian president who concluded a one-day visit to Sudan en route to Nairobi for a meeting of an OAU ad hoc committee on Western Sahara, added that it was still not too late for the OAU to carry out its job. "The moment the OAU's troops are inside Chad, there will be no excuse for Libya or anybody to keep their troops in Chad," he said.

Libyan troops have been in Chad since last year siding with the forces of President Goukouni Oueddei against those of former Defense Minister Hissene Habre. Habre fled the country after his forces were defeated at the hands of the Libyan-backed Goukouni forces. Shagari who arrived here Friday night held talks with President Jaffar Nummieri on bilateral relations, matters of common interest and international issues.

In the interview, he said they discussed the Chadian question in length and thought of ways and means of ensuring peace and stability in that troubled country. "We share common concern about the situation in Chad as well as in other parts of Africa, particularly in Western Sahara. We all abhor the attitude of Libya in trying to poke its nose into the affairs of the OAU member countries," he added. The Nigerian president left Saturday afternoon for Nairobi.

In another development several African leaders begin talks in Nairobi Monday on ways to end the war in Western Sahara between Morocco and Polisario front fighters.

The two-day talks will be the first since an Organization of African Unity (OAU) summit last June when King Hassan of Morocco proposed a referendum in the region to decide whether its inhabitants wished to remain under Rabat's control. The OAU appointed a seven-nation committee of "wise men" to discuss arrangements for a ceasefire in the former Spanish colony and the holding of a referendum.

Sahara tribes elect advisory body

RABAT, Aug. 23 (R) — The tribes of Western Sahara Friday elected 85 members of a special consultative council for Saharan affairs set up to assist King Hassan, the minister of the interior said here Saturday.

Interior Minister Driss Basri told a news conference that 95 percent of the 42,000 registered voters in the four Saharan provinces of Al-Samara, Boujdour and Wadi Dahab voted. In addition to the 85 elected members, 111 women will be coopted to the council along with 12 members of the chamber of representatives (parliament) representing the Saharan provinces.

Basri said the council would assist the king by suggesting reforms and special legislation for the area, and its main mission would be "the preservation of Saharan authenticity in the framework of the government's policy of regionalization and decentralization."

Ex-air chief held for graft in Dacca

DACCA, Aug. 23 (AP) — Retired Air Vice Marshal M.G. Tawab, Bangladesh's former air force chief, was arrested Saturday on corruption charges involving the purchase of a jet, the government-owned Bangladesh Times reported Sunday.

His arrest came one day after he returned from Munich, West Germany, where he was living with his German wife after being removed from office and forced to leave the country by the late President Ziaur Rahman.

Tawab had asked to return last month when his father died but the government rejected his request. Members of his family petitioned the high court which later found the government's rejection illegal. The daily said he was arrested on charges that in 1976, when he headed the ministry of civil aviation, he sought $636,000 in bribes when Bangladesh Airlines purchased an old Boeing plane. A lower court refused Tawab bail after his arrest, the daily said.

Somalia condemns Aden treaty

LONDON, Aug. 23 (R) — Somalia has condemned what it called an "unholy alliance" of Ethiopia, Libya and South Yemen.

In a statement issued Saturday through its London embassy, the Somali government described the treaty of friendship and cooperation signed in Aden this week by the heads of state of the three countries as an aggressive military pact. The primary objective of Ethiopia, Libya and South

Yemen, with the support of a superpower, was "to threaten the security and the stability of all the countries in the region," it said.

Somalia urged the international community to join it in condemning this "naked conspiracy." Ethiopia, Libya and South Yemen have close ties with Moscow. Ethiopia and South Yemen have friendship treaties with the Soviet Union while Libya is an important hard currency customer for Soviet arms.

Treatment of squatters

French protest bid on Africans blocked

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The United States blocked a French move to organize a joint Western protest to South Africa over the treatment of African squatters in Nyanga township, outside Cape Town, The Washington Post reported Sunday.

The treatment culminated as an estimated 2,000 squatters were rounded up in the township by police last week, and transported to the Transkei Bantustan (tribal homeland).

Citing confidential documents, the Post's Johannesburg correspondent said French Ambassador Bernard Dorin, acting dean of the diplomatic corps in Cape Town, called a meeting of heads of mission on Aug. 13 — before last week's action — to discuss the situation in Nyanga.

Participants at the meeting drafted a protest which expressed "concern about recent evicts in the Nyanga crossroads area which are increasingly engaging the attention of our governments and people," the Post reported.

The protest incorporated an "appeal to the South African government to give humanitarian considerations high priority in the handling of the situation."

According to the Post the U.S., British, West German and Canadian ambassadors insisted on consulting their governments before approving the text of the note, and four days later the U.S. representative let it be known that "Washington had refused to join the protest."

At the end of last week only Australia, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Malawi and Sweden had agreed to back the French move, the Post said.

Pretoria said planning transfer of territories

JOHANNESBURG, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The announcement that South Africa and Swaziland have discussed possible frontier modifications has produced wide-ranging press speculation that the republic might ultimately cede vast chunks of territory to its neighbors.

A July meeting in Cape Town between Foreign Minister P. W. Botha and his Swazi counterpart R. V. Dlamini was first reported by Johannesburg's Rand Daily Mail, quoting Swazi sources. The newspaper said that the discussions concerned a "border adjustment" between the republic and the small kingdom of Swaziland, including the cession to the kingdom of part of the KwaZulu Bantustan (tribal homeland) lying south of Mozambique.

If these proposed changes were put into effect Swaziland would finally have direct access to the Indian Ocean, an asset it has coveted since long before independence from Britain in 1968. This particular strip of land, known as Ngomezulu, is largely bush area, poor and generally uncultivated. The local people are either Zulu or Swazi.

Relations between the two peoples are traditionally somewhat tense, and in 1976 several thousand Swazis loyal to the venerable King Sobhuza II fled across the border to Swaziland.

The daily Mail and the weekly Financial Mail both reported that Pretoria was also thinking of handing over the small Bantustan of Kapek, which lies to the north of Swaziland. If the reported border adjustments were to be made the population of Swaziland would rise from just under 600,000 today to almost 1,000,000.

The Mail group speculated that Pretoria aims at drawing Swaziland within the sphere of its plans for a Southern African "constellation of states." This project is based on creating a sort of common market of Southern Africa which would put aside political differences between South Africa and its neighbors and concentrate on economic development.

At present however the idea of a "constellation" seems to be still-born because of hostility toward the Pretoria regime — except from the three so-called independent Bantustans of Transkei, Bophuthatswana and Venda, which have not been recognized by other governments.

The projected border change could produce a double benefit for South Africa, for apart from attracting Swaziland further into its economic net it would reduce the number of blacks within South Africa and create a buffer state between the republic and Marxist Mozambique.

However, the Swazi government is likely to have its work cut out getting the scheme accepted by other African states. The Organization of African Unity (OAU) does not recognize the Pretoria regime and rejects any modification of existing frontiers.

Swaziland would also have to consult leaders of the banned African National Congress (ANC) of South Africa, who would almost certainly oppose any change in existing post-colonial border arrangements.

Pretoria would also be taking its chances with such a scheme because the Zulus, the largest ethnic group in the republic with more than 5,000,000 people, are fundamentally opposed to the idea.

By handing over some land to Swaziland Pretoria could also open the gate to claims by Lesotho on much of the Orange Free State and by Botswana to control of the Bophuthatswana Bantustan. A spokesman for the opposition Federal Progressive Party warned last week that the scheme would "raise a host of problems."

The South African Foreign Ministry has admitted that Pretoria had discussed Kangeane and KwaZulu with Swaziland, but denied that there was any question of ceding territory.

Nevertheless KwaZulu Chief Mxoliso Gathu Buthelesi apparently considered it worth stating that "boundaries, in Africa, are not drawn according to ethnicity."

Putting pressure at right moment

Americans OK the 'Reagan method'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Ronald Reagan was no "method" actor during his B-film career in Hollywood, but in his presidential role he has become a man of many faces and is honing the "Reagan method." The Reagan who ordered production of the neutron warhead was the same Reagan who wisecracked from his hospital bed after being shot by a would-be assassin.

Now 70, the oldest man ever to be elected to the White House has based his style on hammering at one major problem at a time. Reagan's friends and foes alike recognize that he knows how to put on the pressure.

Elected on a ground swell of conservative sentiment, Reagan is carrying out his campaign promises to limit central government interference in the life of the individual, to re-establish (after the Vietnam debacle and the Iranian hostages crisis) foreign confidence in U.S. promises, and to build up American power to put roadblocks in the way of "Soviet expansionism." Opinion polls have shown that a majority of Americans approve so far of Reagan's driving approach.

The Reagan method is to start from a simple principle (simplicity, his critics say) and concentrate on the problem of the moment. During the first six months of his mandate, Reagan gave top priority to putting a brake on a runaway federal budget which the Republican Party blamed for inflation and economic stagnation.

If the president did not get from Congress 100 percent of the tax reductions he asked for, he scored a stunning overall budget victory, overwhelming the Democratic opposition in the House of Representatives.

'TOUGH GUY' IMAGE: President Ronald Reagan, who had a varied career as a journalist and film star before he moved to the White House, as seen in a gun-wielding role in the movie Hong Kong.

In Central America, Reagan has maneuvered in favor of "generally stability" in the face of "subversion" engineered by Cuba and the Soviet Union. In the Middle East he has sought an overall "strategic consensus" which could halt Soviet "expansionism" in the wake of Moscow's intervention in Afghanistan.

He put a temporary embargo on delivery of advanced U.S. fighter planes to Israel after the Israeli Air Force bombed central Beirut and destroyed Iraq's nuclear reactor near Baghdad.

In eyeball-to-eyeball dealings with the Kremlin, the Reagan method seems to run true to form: Wait until the U.S. hand holds enough strong cards, choose the moment to make a decisive play for the main objective, and leave the details to work themselves out.

The main Reagan stake here is to convince Moscow that his administration will no longer accept Soviet nibbling at U.S. strength, whether it be in terms of nuclear warheads, access to raw materials or general influence in the world.

Reagan wrote to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to take up the idea of a summit meeting. But he does not want that meeting to take place until the United States is on the way to closing the security gap which he says has opened up.

In keeping with this line, military spending was the only part of the federal budget which was spared the axe. The decision to go ahead with making and stockpiling neutron warheads appears as a further way of putting trump cards in the American hand before the next round of strategic dealing.

3,000 incidents in July

Growing crime wave reported in Paris

PARIS, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The Sunday newspaper Journal Du Dimanche reported a growing crime wave in the French capital with 3,000 incidents recorded last month along the Champs Elysees. "The most famous boulevard in the world."

It said that travel agents warned foreign tourists: "Walk down the Champs Elysees with your arms crossed over your chest, otherwise you will have your wallet stolen. In the month of July alone, there were 3,000 incidents in which people were robbed, attacked or had their cars broken into on the Champs Elysees."

"Yes, the Champs Elysees — the most famous boulevard in the world... which after midnight becomes a den of cutthroats." A reporter saw nine "punks" attack a couple, embracing the woman and beating up her partner.

Last Thursday about 10 p.m. a reporter saw four youths and three girls attack a young woman in a cinema queue. They ripped off her blouse. "Not a single person in the queue tried to intervene, they pretended to see and hear nothing."

At about the same time a woman passer-by had her handbag stolen by two youths on a powerful motorcycle which have oozed the pavement behind her and as the pillion-passenger ripped away her handbag, roared away into the night.

The newspaper said that police warned the public to be careful about resisting a pickpocket — "otherwise you will be knifed — it is their favorite weapon." It reported that a man in his forties was attacked by some youths, armed with knives, who knocked off his spectacles, stole his wallet, watch and shoes. "If he had resisted, he would have been stabbed."

Where did this happen — "right in front of the Paris Opera House in the center of the Capital." A senior police officer, asked what a person should do in Paris at night, replied: "Frankly, nobody knows."

The newspaper, which has France's biggest Sunday newspaper circulation, in an open letter to the interior minister, the mayor and the prefect (police chief) of Paris, said: "You had better do something — and quickly."

Carter flies to China today

PEKING, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter flies to China Monday, assured of a warm welcome from a country well-known for remembering its friends. China counts Carter among its friends because of his role in the 1978 accord normalizing Chinese-U.S. ties and cementing a relationship seen by both countries as increasingly important.

Had he not been defeated last November by Ronald Reagan, Carter was expected to come to China this year on a formal visit. Now he is out of office the visit will back some of the pomp and ceremony of a state occasion. He is expected to be given a very friendly reception.

Just whom in the Chinese leadership he will see has not been announced. An obvious possibility is vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping, who visited the United States, and championed the growth of U.S. China links.

Carter's last meeting with a top Chinese official was in July 1980 in Tokyo when he met Hua Guofeng, then China's Communist Party chairman and premier. The former U.S. president's visit is his first overseas trip since he lost office, apart from a visit to West Germany to meet American hostages from Iran.

China has proved popular for a long list of Carter administration officials this year. Visitors have included former National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and ex-secretary James Schlesinger.

They have reported from their meetings with officials that China continues to set great store by its relationship with the United States, particularly in view of what Peking regards as preventing Soviet expansionism.

Meanwhile, the New China News Agency charged Sunday that the Soviet Union was trying "in every conceivable way" to influence pacifist movements in Western Europe. Moscow had launched a "peace offensive" at a time when pacifism and neutralism had gained ground in a number of European countries," an NCNA commentary said.

Soviet proposals to suspend the deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe, to hold separate disarmament talks with European countries and to create a non-nuclear zone in Northern Europe had the single intention of sowing discord between the United States and Western European countries, the NCNA said.

The NCNA said West Germany was the main target of the Soviet "peace offensive" because it was to receive nearly half the nuclear missiles deployed by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) in Western Europe.

Spanish move to make Gibraltar NATO base

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AP) — Spain will propose next month that Gibraltar be converted from a British military base to one run by NATO as a means of ending the two nations' centuries-old feud over the rock. The Sunday Times reported. According to the newspaper, the Madrid government will also propose an early reopening — possibly as soon as October — of the British colony's border with Spain, sealed by the Spanish 12 years ago.

The sovereignty of Gibraltar was in dispute ever since a joint British-Dutch force seized it from Spain in 1704. More recently, the decision of Prince Charles and Princess Diana to embark from Gibraltar on their honeymoon cruise of the Mediterranean Aug. 1 was believed responsible for Spanish King Juan Carlos' decision not to attend the British royal wedding.

The newspaper, quoting unidentified Spanish sources, said "notheless it is clear the Spanish are about to launch a major diplomatic initiative on Gibraltar." However, the newspaper also quoted a spokesman at the British Foreign Office as saying, "We have heard nothing from the Spanish so far."

Party groups to fight legal battle in Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Warring factions in the opposition Sri Lanka Freedom Party (SLFP) were expected to go to court this week to settle their disputes which have split the party right down the middle. The battle is between a faction led by the party's president, Sirimavo Bandaranaike, and a group of dissidents headed by the deputy leader Mairipala Senanayake.

Mrs. Bandaranaike's son, Anura, a 30-year old member of parliament, has deserted his mother and become the leading figure among the dissidents next to Senanayake.

The dissidents have accused Mrs. Bandaranaike of running the affairs of the party in a dictatorial and unconstitutional manner. Mrs. Bandaranaike has in turn charged Senanayake and his followers were plotting with the ruling United National Party to oust her from the leadership of the SLFP of which she has been president for the past 21 years.

The SLFP, founded by Mrs. Bandaranaike's late husband 30 years ago, is the major opposition party in the country and the possible alternative party to form a government.

The dispute came to a head when Senanayake, 65, accompanied by Anura and his other supporters occupied the SLFP headquarters in Colombo last Wednesday morning.

The group of 13 dissidents, all of whom are members of the 22-member central committee, the main policy-making body of the party, held a meeting and after suspending the party's secretary, Ratnasiri Wickramanayake, appointed Anura in his place as acting secretary.

Anura took charge of the keys of the building and gave leave to the staff until further notice. The group then left the building after locking the door and placing four security guards.

A little while later, Mrs. Bandaranaike, now a 65-year-old grandmother, stormed the building with her supporters, chased the security guards, broke open the padlock and recaptured the headquarters. Anura then complained to the police saying that arson, looting and theft of money and documents were feared after his mother reoccupied the headquarters.

Mrs. Bandaranaike, using her powers as party president, suspended the 13 dissidents including her deputy Senanayake and son, Anura, and told the party members that Wickramanayake was still the legal secretary of the party.

The dramatic events at the SLFP headquarters climaxed that night with the government taking over the building under emergency regulations. A Defense Ministry official accompanied by a posse of policemen and soldiers supported by an armored car, went to the premises, issued a requisitioning order under emergency laws promulgated 48 hours earlier to deal with communal violence, and sealed the building. Mrs. Bandaranaike, who was present at the time with her daughter, Chandrika and other supporters, protested to no avail.

The government has said it took over the building temporarily to prevent a breach of the peace and that it would be handed back to the legal owners to be settled by courts.

World lawyers urge human rights panel

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, Southern France, Aug. 23 (AFP) — International lawyers from 40 countries, including Poland and the Soviet Union, Sunday called for a United Nations body of observers to be formed "to protect the rights of man."

They were attending the fourth three-day annual conference, which started Friday, of the Geneva-based International Human Rights Foundation.

The chairman, Armand Hammer, of the United States, told the delegates: "East-West relations have never been worse for 60 years." Nobel Peace Prize winners Sean McBride and Lord Noel Baker attended the conference.

NEW DELHI, (AFP) — About 50 persons were injured, eight of them seriously, when police fired on an irate mob in the Gursarai County in Jhansi district of Uttar Pradesh state, about 700 kms west of New Delhi, according to press reports reaching here Sunday. The trouble started when the police arrested two men and allegedly tied them to a tree. Incensed by the police action a large crowd demonstrated at the police station demanding action against the policemen involved. The police resorted to firing to control the situation.

HONG KONG, (AFP) — Drug smugglers are using China as a route to smuggle narcotics from the "golden triangle" on the Thai-Burmese-Chinese borders to sell to Hong Kong, narcotics agents said here. The agents were alerted to the diversion when Chinese authorities in Canton recently seized 16.95 kgs of opium and arrested 14 suspects, one of whom was said to be a buyer for a Hong Kong syndicate. It was the first time the Cantoo route had been discovered, narcotics agents said.

LONDON, (AFP) — West Indian community leaders described Britain as "the mother of racism" in a report made public Sunday on riots in the British capital this year. The report, submitted to a government commission, accused London police of hunting out blacks and said a "deep wedge of fear" existed between police and the capital's West Indian community. The racist legislation and the growing influence of the extreme right-wing groups like the National Front and the British Movement, were at the root of Britain's racial problems, the community leaders said.

NEW DELHI, (AFP) — India will raise a 500-strong armed battalion for north Bengal bordering the tiny Himalayan state of Sikkim, to curb "anti-social" activities and cross-border smuggling, police reports from north Bengal disclosed Monday.

UAE to rank 4th in refining by '83

ABU DHABI, Aug. 23 (WAM) — The United Emirates will rank fourth among Arab countries in oil refining capacity by 1983...

The study, made by Dubai Chamber of Commerce and Industry, estimates the 1983 refining capacity to be at 290,000 BPD compared to 15,000 BPD in 1979.

The study said the process of refining oil to produce oil by products and the liquidation of gas has expanded noticeably during the past years due to the inclination of most oil-producing countries to increase oil refining installations.

The refining capacity of the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (OAPEC) member states has thus reached 2.76 million BPD and is expected to amount to 5.36 million BPD during 1983.

Currently, Saudi Arabia, produces the largest amount of refined oil, followed by Egypt, and Kuwait.

2,000 attend talks on solar energy

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AFP) — A world solar energy forum attended by nearly 2,000 experts from 76 countries opened in Brighton, southern England, Sunday.

The forum was organized by the International Solar Energy Society with backing from UNESCO and the European Economic Community.

The week-long talks will enable the experts to exchange views on the role of solar energy.

Things that have gone up pull France down

PARIS, Aug. 23 (AFP) — A lot of things have gone up in France lately, some good and some bad — and one of the worst is unemployment...

The July figures represented 1.3 percent increase seasonally from June, but even more significant is the fact that the new total of 1.85 million jobless workers is 25.8 percent more than were recorded a year ago.

Of course, France is far from the only industrial country to be plagued by high and rising joblessness — but that makes the situation no easier to handle for the government.

Actually, the new Socialist government — in office only since late May, when 23 years of conservative or center-right rule came to an end — has not yet had time to influence the employment picture, and the French public does not expect it to solve such problems overnight, or even this year.

But it is nevertheless a worrisome factor for the government which has given priority to fighting joblessness and will be graded in part on its success in this difficult battle.

Finance Minister Jacques Delors said that the July increase reflected rises that had been held back by the previous government.

But unemployment is not the only thing to have gone up lately. It is now expected that the official consumer price index will be up by 1.701.8 percent for July which would be the biggest monthly increase since January of 1980.

Fire damages freighter in French port

LA ROCHELLE, France, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Fire has seriously damaged the Singapore-registered freighter ship Mahil, in port here on the Atlantic coast...

The fire broke out early Saturday morning in the Mahil's engine room, and the South Korean crew tried to bring it under control themselves.

The fire departments of La Rochelle and the neighboring towns of Rochefort, Saintes, Royan and Saint Jean d'Angely finally controlled the blaze by midnight Saturday firefighters said.

The blaze burned all of the Mahil's oil reserves, firemen said. It was not known whether the ship, which remained in port overnight, could be repaired.

The fire was not immediately known. The Mahil arrived here Saturday from Tel Aviv with a shipment of phosphate fertilizer.

Schmidt faces rift over budget

BONN, Aug. 23 (R) — West Germany's government coalition parties are flexing their muscles for what promises to be a tough fight over the country's 1982 budget this autumn.

After announcing austerity measures worth 14.5 billion marks ($5.9 billion) late last month, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt went on holiday, leaving ministers to find another 1.5 billion marks ($600 million) in savings and agree on moves to stimulate a flagging economy and fight unemployment.

But as soon as Schmidt's back was turned, his Social Democratic Party (SPD) and the junior coalition Free Democratic Party (FDP) began sniping at each other about how those aims should be achieved.

The FDP leader and vice-chancellor Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Bonn's foreign minister, has picked a fight with the Social Democrats by calling for sensitive cuts in unemployment benefits and sickness pay and declaring SPD plans for an income surtax "deader than did."

The Social Democrats are themselves divided on where to find the missing billions and how to stimulate the economy.

Damascus cool to N-S dialogue

DAMASCUS, Aug. 23 (R) — Syria has said the planned summit of 22 nations next October on North-South relations did not represent the international community and that the U.N. should organize a conference on the world economy.

Economy Minister Muhammad Al-Atrash said Syria hoped that the meeting of industrialized and developing countries in Mexico would have every success.

He added that this conference does not represent as it should the international community. Accordingly, any mini-conference to reform the world economic system should emanate from the U.N. and its members chosen from the General Assembly.

These were a pressing need to reform this system, he went on. Industrialized countries should "remove commercial barriers against exports of countries of the Third World." Dr.

BRIEFS

BONN (AFP) — Many West German households are two-television families, 72 percent of the West Germans households have a color television and 70 percent have a black and white model, a market study by the Grundig firm said.

It is only since last February that the percentage of color televisions has surpassed that of black and white models. About 3.7 million sets were sold last year in West Germany, with about two-thirds being color sets.

The study also noted a growing taste for small screens and portables.

PARIS (AFP) — A Spanish fishing vessel, the Panika, was caught in the act of fraudulent fishing in French waters in the Gulf of Gasogne and was intercepted by French authorities.

The boat allegedly was fishing in the French economic zone (200 miles from the coast) and did not have the proper licence assigned by the EEC to commercial fishing vessels allowed to ply French waters.

WIESBADEN (AFP) — Franco-German trade showed a surplus in Bonn's favor during the first six months of this year, amounting to 5,000 million marks (one dollar equals about 2.4 marks), on a trade volume of 46 million marks. Trade was 7.4 percent in value, and the surplus by 2.6 percent, compared to the first semester last year.

For all of last year, West Germany accumulated a surplus of 10,000 million marks, a rise of 47 percent over 1979, in its trade relations with France.

LONDON (AFP) — Despite rumors circulating about Romania's worsening financial situation, Bucharest has just obtained a new loan of $80 million for eight years on the Eurodollar market, sources in financial circles said.

The loan is to have a grace period of four years during which no payment need be made.

BRUSSELS (AFP) — While the Belgian recession appears to have bottomed out, even weak growth during 1981 appears improbable, the Belgian economic ministry has said.

Karmal withdraws unpopular land reform

By Najmul Hasan

NEW DELHI — Afghan President Babrak Karmal has all but reversed a radical but much resented land reform program in an attempt to win the support of powerful tribal and religious leaders for his Marxist government.

New concessions announced recently in Kabul, the Afghan capital, restored to Muslim clergymen, tribal chiefs and landlords the freedom to own and inherit land. Western diplomats here say Soviet-backed president Karmal, faced with continuing insurgency in the countryside, is trying to win support from the country's disenchanting conservative groups to widen his power base.

Kabul radio, monitored in New Delhi, claimed that the amended reforms decreed by the country's revolutionary council took into consideration Afghan traditions, customs and the right to own property.

Four years ago, Afghanistan's first Marxist government of President Noor Muhammad Taraki moved to end the inequalities of land laws by limiting every family's holdings to 15 acres and confiscating anything in excess. Land reform was one of three related measures imposed by the Taraki government. The others were abolition of peasant mortgage debt and marriage dowries.

The aim was to free poor peasants and landless laborers from a spiral of bets to landowners and money lenders and redistribute land in equal-sized plots. The redistribution began Jan. 1, 1979. A government statement last year said huge tracts of land owned by tribal chieftains and major landlords had been handed over to sharecroppers, landless laborers and nomads.

Analysts here said the aim was to win the support of peasants in a bid to destroy the political power of landowners and tribal and religious leaders.

But the reforms, cutting across centuries of traditions, disrupted the rural areas. In many places, no crops were planted, forcing the government to depend heavily on food imports, mainly from the Soviet Union. A former economic adviser to President Karmal said last April that land reform measures had totally broken down because of the arbitrary way in which they were introduced.

Muhammad Siddiq Farhang said anyone dealing with the Afghans should avoid the three Z's — zar (gold), zan (women) and Zamin (land). The Marxists had made the mistake of interfering with all three, he said. Reforms were a major cause of a rebellion in the countryside which increased with the invasion of Soviet troops in December 1979 when President Karmal seized power.

The new government, fanned with widespread resentment against the reforms, slowed down their implementation while seeking support of all strata of society.

An official statement broadcast by Kabul radio last June, however, expressed the government's determination to push ahead with its program of land distribution. Peasants were promised restoration of land ownership rights, lost due to what the statement called "sabotage and wilful mismanagement in the administration."

But the latest decree said surplus land in possession of tribal chiefs, protecting the country's frontiers, will remain. Landlords with more land than the official ceiling will continue to be its owners on condition that they show an increase in agricultural output, which is to be sold to the government. (R)

REALISTIC PROPOSAL

The few weeks which have passed since Prince Fahd's statement, in which he spelled clearly the only rational and realistic way toward a permanent peace in the Middle East has sufficed to show the nature of the reactions from both the Arab world and the international community.

The Prince's statement, it has been widely observed, has reopened the possibility of a new initiative in the Middle East, and has emphasized the view of the overwhelming majority of the Arab governments, which regard the Camp David approach as moribund. It has also been observed that the principles enunciated by Prince Fahd have already been recognized by international community's major forums as congruent with the legal, political and ethical demands of the situation of all the involved parties in the Middle East.

The reaction from the Arab world as a whole — there were the expected dubious minor exceptions — has been both resolute and enthusiastic. There is no surprise in this as the Prince's statement reiterated the line of the Baghdad Summit, which was later adapted by the Tunis and Amman Summits, as well as by the Islamic Summit in Taif.

As to the United States, it met Prince Fahd's call with the usual perplexity. It can see the choice before it clearly, but cannot make up its mind. One way is to heed the Arab argument for justice and peace, and the other is to go on in its blind support for Israel, thus eventually losing its friends in the Arab world and putting its vital interests in jeopardy.

Israel's reaction was also predictable. The Prince's plan confounds its expansionist and warlike schemes and strikes at the heart of its ambition, now increasingly voiced, of annexing the occupied territories.

Predictable also was the silence from the Soviet Union over the issue, as it has already produced its own plan, which to many seemed extremely vague on several of the major issues involved in a settlement for the Palestinian question. The issue of an independent, sovereign Palestinian state, as well as that of recognition of the PLO as the sole representative for the people of Palestine were all but evaded.

This may well have been the reason why Mr. Hani al Hassan, chief political adviser to PLO chairman, Yasser Arafat, hailed Prince Fahd's program as far better than the Soviet proposal. Yet for all that, there was some surprise at the apparent hesitations in the PLO leadership's reaction, given that the program contains all those points which the PLO has upheld as necessary for a just and lasting peace.

The PLO, however, is now moving fast toward clarifying its position. Chairman Yasser Arafat came out clearly for the Kingdom's program when he spoke to The New York Times, calling it "a correct and certain way to the establishing of a lasting peace in the Middle East."

Despite shelling, life goes on as usual in Beirut

By Colin Smith

BEIRUT — Outside there are tall, modern apartment buildings and people are enjoying the cosy afternoon sunshine on their balconies. Some adolescent girls in sleeveless dresses are listening to a radio. Women are taking washing off a line. A father is seated at a table playing backgammon with his son and an old man with slightly protruding ears sits staring into space as he has been doing for most of the day. These people are mainly olive-skinned and dark-haired. They could be Greeks or Iberians.

From my hotel window, I can also look into the offices of an American news agency across the street where there is a nice Armenian gentleman called Joe who is playing a teleprinter like a concert pianist. If I open my window for the sound-track, I can hear above the traffic noise the sound of gunshots. For these people are neither Spaniards or Greeks. They are Lebanese, and there are always gunshots in Beirut although most of them are of no importance and Joe would never dream of including them in his messages on great regional events which, at that moment, were taking place a few miles to the south where the Israeli air force was visiting.

More people crowd onto their balconies as the Pratt and Whiteyets on the Israeli F-16s begin to sound over the city itself and at last the Syrian flag begins to stutter futilely after them. Or, building site below, two workmen wearing stiff canvas hats pause for a moment, each at the end of a long scaffolding pole, and then go back to their work. On the pavement, a street vendor is still trying to call his wares. He is selling plastic donkey which dispense cigarettes through their bottom when you pull the tail up.

It is sometimes difficult to decide whether commerce ultimately controls anarchy, brings it back from the brink, or anarchy commerce in Beirut. Even at the height of the civil war, which refuses to end neatly but splutters on like a bad firework, the opposing sides were always careful to leave a door open so that commerce could continue. Beirut remains the entrepot for the Arab hinterland just as its much-shelled airport is still the main transit point for the area.

All the main protagonists have their own parts. The Palestinians and the Lebanese Freikorps usually dubbed Lebanese and nationalist — although some of them are neither — have Sidon and Tyre to the south of Beirut, while the Phalangists, who are predominantly Maronite Christians, have Junieh to the north.

At the same time, Beirut port itself continues to function after a fashion. One of its berths contains so many half-sunken wrecks it looks like Pearl Harbor but since the civil war officially ended in 1976 — the Lebanese call the war "the events" having fixed no title on all the events since —

Muslims and Christians have been working happily alongside each other, the bonds of dockland camaraderie strengthened by the odd shell that falls into their midst.

There is some attempt to collect import duties and the Phalangists impose their own taxes in their enclave but blata smuggling is the norm. Television sets arrive in a cargo container surrounded by packets of washing powder, for instance. The Lebanese trader will often be scrupulously legal as far as his own activities are concerned. A favorite ploy is to ship goods to Cyprus, thus avoiding the war risk demands of the underwriters, where they are sold to a smuggler. Once they arrive in Lebanon they are resold to the original agent. The result of this laissez faire climate is a wild prosperity amidst the filth and the ruins.

When I left Beirut, it was sales time on Al Hamra in the western half of the city. Dress shops were mostly selling last year's Parisian look, the French having made a deeper impression on the Lebanese in 35 years than the Turks did in 300. The local obsession with style leads to a plethora of brand names: Ted Lapidus, Christian Dior, Yves St Laurent. Some are sewn on to garments St Laurent would not know.

Valium and sleeping pills can be bought without prescription and sales are predictably high although a psychiatrist at the Lebanon Hospital for Mental and Nervous Disorders reported a low level of psychosis. He showed me a graph which indicated that the number of admissions went up during each short-lived ceasefire. "It's the old story," he said, "When your life is in danger you can't afford the luxury of being mentally sick."

One consolation is a cornucopia of cheap electrical goods. Home video machines are probably as common here as New York or London and, one of the best local investments in town are the video libraries stocking the latest American and European films. Cinemas are by no means defunct — Machine Gun Kelly was playing at the Hamra during my last visit. But few venture out after dark.

Dr. Kamal Salibi, an historian who lectures on Arab and Byzantine history at the American University, has written three books since the fighting started six years ago. One was an internationally acclaimed summary of the causes of the civil war. "What else is there to do in the evening," he asked over lunch at The Bristol Hotel where white-gloved waiters serve from one of the best menus in a city that can still be an Epicurean's delight.

In the last two-and-a-half years, the professor's car has clocked 6,300 kilometers. When Lebanon was at peace, he averaged 40,000 a year with trips to the mountains — there's good skiing in the Lebanon — and his beach — near Junieh. This semi-ghetto existence has had a tremendously beneficial effect on family life, claims Dr. Salibi. Whereas before the killing started the Lebanese middle class were involved in the usual generation battle with the children, especially in Beirut which prided itself on being one of those cities that never

Saudi Arabian Press Review

All newspapers Sunday covered their lead story with the Kingdom's decision to fix its oil price at $32 per barrel. Minister of State Muhammad Ibrahim Masoud said in a press statement Saturday that the Kingdom's decision is based on factors isolated from political indications and Saudi Arabia's resolve to cut its oil output in order to preserve the higher interests of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

In a front-page story, Al-Bilad reported that Crown Prince Fahd has ordered the construction of a grand mosque at the site of Jeddah's old airport. Newspapers gave front-page coverage to the meeting of the Islamic Capitals Organization which was opened in Riyadh Saturday by Prince Satam, capital's deputy governor. They also reported that fire has been put out in all but one oil storage tank in Kuwait and the Kuwaiti Council of Ministers is holding an emergency session to consider the situation.

Some newspapers reported Libyan leader Muammar Qaddafi's scheduled visit to the United Arab Emirates for talks on bilateral relations with UAE leader Sheikh Zayed bin Sultan Al Nahyan. Okaz, meanwhile, front-paged the arrival of President Hassan Gouled of Djibouti in the Kingdom from Khartoum, after the conclusion of a two-day private visit to Sudan.

Newspaper editorials mostly dealt with OPEC's Geneva meeting held to discuss the organization's unity and the oil output and its prices. Al-Medina noted in an editorial that the ministerial council meetings proved that the Kingdom's stances received a majority support, but the organization's minority group prevented it from reaching a collective accord. The paper endorsed the view of Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, minister of petroleum and mineral resources, that the oil glut was not brought about by Saudi Arabia's oil output but because of a sharp rise in the oil prices of some OPEC members. The paper stressed that the basic aim of the Kingdom's oil policy is to restore stability in the oil market. It hoped that OPEC's thinking on the slashing of oil prices will receive a quick response both from the consumer and industrialized countries.

On the same subject, Al-Bilad observed that the Kingdom's decision always stems from its keenness of serving the interests of world community. In view of this, the paper said, Saudi Arabia decided to cut its oil production by one million barrels as of next month and also agreed to fix the oil price at $34 per barrel as a mediatory solution to the pricing problem. The Kingdom took these decisions to support OPEC, said the paper, adding that Saudi Arabia takes decisions after a careful and serious study of the prevailing circumstances and keeping in view the welfare of the international community.

Dealing with the same subject, Al-Nadwa referred to State Minister Masoud's press statement and said it was natural for the Kingdom to insist on its oil stance to cope with the stances of other OPEC members. Under the prevailing situation, the paper said, OPEC countries ought to rise above personal considerations and consider the whole situation with a measure of seriousness on the point that OPEC was established to safeguard the wealth of its peoples and to eliminate the ambitious designs of others.

Okaz noted that the Kingdom has continuously supported OPEC and is still showing full cooperation in order to prove its sincere intention toward the stabilization of oil matter. While Saudi Arabia decided to cut its output and raise the oil price to $34 to show its solidarity with OPEC, "other betters and bargainers who previously agreed on $34, backed away and started demanding $35." The Kingdom, therefore, had no choice but to turn down their "trick and bargaining attitude" and to announce its decision to keep the price at $32 per barrel. The paper reiterated that Saudi Arabia is not prepared to accept being from any quarter, big or small, and cares little about those who are ignorant of facts and indulge themselves in hurling accusations on others.

On the other hand, Al-Riyadh discussed the Lebanese situation and said that some Arab states feel that the present ceasefire will serve the purpose until the Arab summit conference takes place in November. They view that the intervening period may be exploited to clear the Arab atmosphere and to explain the situation in South Lebanon to Arab and foreign officials. The paper lauded Saudi Arabia's diplomatic efforts which led to a ceasefire in Lebanon, and said that this achievement would not have been seen if the matter were left to an Arab summit. The Kingdom's ceaseless efforts in explaining the situation at the international level and its endeavors to end Arab rifts aim to create a unified and strong Arab stance, the paper added.

Release upset Nixon

Watergate tapes draw raves, visitors flock to hear them

By Lloyd Grove

WASHINGTON (WP) — The prentices, a couple from Britain on their first trip to Washington, latched to see the Smithsonian, the FBI and Congress. What really caught their fancy, though, were the tapes of Richard Nixon.

"We followed Watergate quite closely at the time," Gordon Prentice, 30, said the other day, after hearing John Dean alert Nixon to a "cancer on the presidency," a high spot in the White House conversations. "But this," he added with a Scottish lilt, "this is completely fascinating."

Much to the surprise of the folks at the National Archives, who had planned to end the tapes' 14-month run at summer's end, people still are flocking to the weekday sessions — and still giving the 31 tapes rave reviews.

No Stamp In Interest

"We expected interest to drop off, it really hasn't," said Archives spokesman Bea Ruhe of the recordings, whose 12 1/2 hours are played over a seven-day cycle. "So instead of retiring the tapes and making them available on individual request, we'll probably be playing them indefinitely."

Every week, between 75 and 100 people show up at the building's Pennsylvania Avenue entrance to hear the tapes. In all, about 15,000 — from as far away as Australia and Nepal — have done so since the Archives started playing them in May of last year.

Serving as host for the sessions, which are held in a second-floor reading room, is one of the 25 professional archivists involved in cataloging the 6,000 hours of tapes and 20,000 cubic feet of presidential papers yet to be made public. On duty recently was Scott Parham, 50, a stocky ex-history teacher with a shock of red hair.

After a chatty introduction — "Where're you from? been enjoying your stay?" — He explained that 30 of the tapes span a period from June 23, 1972 — six days after the Watergate break-in — to April 19, 1973, that they were made public by an act of Congress, and that all 30 were used as prosecution evidence in the trial of several Nixon associates (the remaining tape — a discussion among Nixon, John Connally and other officials in the Oval Office on March 23, 1971 — concerns price supports for milk producers).

"The case is called 'The United States vs. John Mitchell et al,' which is just legal language for 'and others,'" Parham said, taking on the tone of the pedagogue. "Mitchell was Attorney general. Anybody know who the 'and others' are? How about you?" He pointed across the room.

"Well," said the surprised visitor, squirming. "There was (H.R.) Haldeman, uh, (John) Ehrlichman, and I think, Mardian."

"Mardian?" Parham said, repeating the name of Mitchell's trusted deputy, Robert C. Mardian. "Are you a lawyer? Only the lawyers remember Mardian."

Jim Hastings, deputy director of the Nixon project, said that, aside from tourists, the tapes have attracted a number of other inquisitive folk in recent months — summer congressional interns, scholars from Finland, and a contingent of African journalists who emerged from their session "with glazed eyes," he reported.

Most react favorably, but last November, Hastings recalled, a curmudgeonly gentleman interrupted a session to declare: "You're just playing these tapes to help the democrats win the election, and what you're really doing is bringing a bunch of degenerates off the streets to fill the room."

That got chuckles from a phalanx of Justice Department lawyers who happened to be sitting up front, Hastings said.

Two weeks ago, Samuel Dash, the former counsel to the Senate Watergate Committee and now a professor at Georgetown University, dropped by to hear them for the first time — eight years after his staff coaxed the secret of the tapes' existence from White House aide Alexander Butterfield.

"I didn't want to go over there just by myself," said Dash. "You know, since I had such a major role in the thing, I just wouldn't have felt comfortable about it. But when one of the (Georgetown) faculty members told me a group of them was going, I thought, 'well, maybe I just ought to go over, too.'"

After attending three sessions, he said, he is glad that he did.

"There's quite a difference between reading the cold print in the transcripts and actually hearing the voices and intonation — the conspiratorial tone of the voices," he said.

A Worthwhile Experience

"Shortly afterward, I sat down and wrote a letter to Sen. (Sam) Ervin," he said, referring to the North Carolina Democrat who chaired the Senate Democrat Committee. "I said to him, 'they should be heard by all Americans every once in a while, just to remind themselves what happened in this country, so we can get a new pledge of vigilance.'"

Not all of those who were intimately involved in Watergate are so eager to listen to the tapes, however. Former Nixon aide Charles Colson, for instance, whose voice shows up in the tapes in a telephone conversation with E. Howard Hunt in November 1972, said through a spokesman last week, "I haven't been there to listen to the tapes, and I don't plan to."

There are many ordinary citizens, though, who think the experience is well worthwhile.

"This is better than a soap opera," said Karen Wehler, a 29-year-old learning disabilities specialist from Fairfax County, who was determined to attend every session.

"It makes for an enjoyable morning," said Jim Goodman, 30, a police officer from New Berlin, Wis.

As for the prentices — Gordon, a government employee in London, and Bridget, a high school history teacher — they already had visited twice and were thinking of coming again.

"It's amazing to us how inarticulate and disjointed Nixon sounds," Gordon said. Bridget added, "when we go back home, we'll certainly recommend it to our friends."

Hastings said that, while the tap "no longer have a great informational value," they still are a touchy subject at the Archives. Three lawsuits concerning the Nixon presidential collection there — two brought by Nixon and one by former White House Chief of Staff Haldeman — currently are in various stages of litigation. Both men seek financial compensation from the general services administration, while Nixon also is attempting to limit public access to the materials.

Hastings said that the 31 private conversations, which Congress released to the public over Nixon's protests, still could have a bearing on the suits.

Second phase of Voyager mission will obtain more detailed data about Saturn

By George Alexander

PASADENA, Calif. (LAT) — The second time around anything is supposed to be better than the first and scientists at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory say that the Voyager 2 spacecraft's exploration of Saturn and its moon is already shaping up better in many ways than Voyager 1's investment of the planet late last year.

When Voyager 2 swings past the ringed planet on the evening of Aug. 25, it will come within 63,000 miles of Saturn's hatterscotch-colored cloud tops — 14,000 miles closer than Voyager 1's approach. The closer approach will mean more detailed pictures can be obtained.

More than that, Voyager 2 will approach the planet from a different angle than that of its identical-twin predecessor. "This time," said Prof. Edward C. Stone, a Caltech physicist and project scientist, "we are coming in above the ring plane on the (sun) lighted side."

As a result, said Stone, "the pictures should be even more spectacular than the ones from Voyager 1, which went beneath the ring plane and got images mostly from the dark side of the rings."

The rings have long been Saturn's glory — and mystery. First spotted by Galileo in 1610, the flat, washer-like rings have long been thought to be made up of small particles. But were the particles simply left-over fragments from the formation of Saturn? Or were they debris from moons that were pulled apart by the planet's powerful gravitational fields and scattered in orbit around it?

Some scientists now lean toward the second hypothesis, since Voyager 1's cameras detected hundreds of ringlets not only in the so-called "classical" Rings A, B and C — the more prominent ones seen by Galileo — but also in the dark between rings long thought to be empty, and in the four additional rings now known to exist.

Voyager 2's cameras will give selected parts of Saturn's rings and moon a very thorough going-over, where the first spacecraft conducted more of a general survey of the territory.

The second spacecraft, for example, will lock a light-sensitive sensor on the star Delta Scorpii on the far side of the rings from the spacecraft's trajectory. As the spacecraft approaches Saturn, the ringlets will alternatively hide and expose the star's light from the Voyager 2's sensor — somewhat like a movie camera trained on a light on the far side of a picket fence.

By measuring the on-again, off-again flashes of Delta Scorpii's light, scientists will later be better able to count the number of ringlets and to measure their particle densities.

Voyager 2 will also transmit an image of the rings edge-on as it passes from the sunlit to the shadowed side. If successful, this picture may tell scientists whether their suppositions about the "spokes" seen in some of the rings are correct.

The leading theory to explain these curious, radial features are that they are electrically charged, fine-grained particles that have been slightly elevated out of the ring plane by the planet's magnetic fields. Voyager 2 will test that idea.

The bizarrely braided F-ring — with two of its ringlets apparently twisted around each other like a movie star's gold chains — also will come under close scrutiny by Voyager 2. The spacecraft will take a series of images, from different points along its trajectory, to allow scientists to reconstruct three-dimensional pictures of the curious braids.

By concentrating on specific areas of interest Voyager 2 will be forced to ignore some points of interest. The moon Titan will get only a passing glance, for example, although other moons will be seen in sharper detail than were by Voyager 1. The moon Phoebe will be seen for the first time — it was not near Voyager 1's field of view last November.

Independence protests restricted, Belizeans worry about the future

By Bob Rivard

BELIZE CITY, Belize — The last vestiges of the once-proud British empire crumble away here when this former pirate haven and backwater mangrove swamp becomes the last mainland colony to win independence. But many Belizeans are tearing up their invitations to the celebration in a rare fit of bad manners because they fear Guatemala will settle a longstanding territorial claim by invading the tiny country.

The issue has divided the people and set off street riots and demonstrations. Belize is probably the only country in the world where the government has been forced to enact a law restricting its people from protesting their own impending freedom. Colony or sovereign nation, Belize's main threat is more likely from itself and its miserable physical and economic condition.

As the British fur the Union Jack for the last time, they have little to show for their 120-year rule in the small, dirt-poor and underpopulated country. Once a source of valuable mahogany, Belize now is an expensive reminder of the days gone by, a distant nuisance requiring the protection of 1,600 British troops, and millions of dollars in direct aid every year.

By far the least developed of the Central American countries, Belize is a strange blend of Caribbean seaport and Mestizo Indian village, the legacy of Mayan Indians, African slaves and British pirates, traders and loggers.

The size of El Salvador (population 5 million), Belize struggles along with 145,000 people: Creoles are the majority, Mestizos are the second, along with a variety of Mayas, Caribs, whites and others, 40,000 of whom have given up on any future in Belize and have left for the United States.

The official language is English, but Spanish is common on the streets. Mayan and Carib are common in the south, and almost everyone everywhere speaks enough Creole to communicate.

Population and language aside, Belize has plenty of other problems as it wobbles down the unpaved road to freedom.

The people began buying televisions years ago, but they are still waiting for a television station, a distant priority on the disorganized government's drawing board. After the wedding of Britain's Prince Charles and Lady Diana, the local subjects of Belize gathered at the Fort George Hotel and other public places to watch imported video tapes of the wedding.

There are no daily newspapers and only one radio station, the government-owned Radio Belize. For members of the Opposition Party, it is not a happy situation — the government gives them three-minute slots for political speeches but reserves the right to edit their copy.

"They are always complaining," said Deputy Premier C.L.B. Rogers, a member of the ruling People's United Party. Under Belize's peculiar political system, more a parody than a copy of the British system, Rogers rose to be the country's second most powerful politician by losing in the 1979 elections. Following his defeat for a seat in the 18-member Belize house of representatives, he became eligible for a position in the eight-seat senate, the other half of the national assembly and a body composed of political losers who are appointed by their party heads.

Rogers was appointed to the senate by Premier George Price and was subsequently named minister of internal affairs and justice, a cabinet post. From there he was eligible to become Price's deputy. Rogers also acknowledged in an interview that while he lived in the United States as a "younger man" he was convicted of "some felony criminal offenses and failed."

Belize Is Isolated

The unconventional is a way of life in Belize. Hurricane Hattie led officials to carve out a new capital city, named Belmopan, in the inland jungle in 1970. The road connecting Belmopan, a tinderlock outpost of 4,000 civil servants, with Belize City, whose population of 47,000 makes it the only city of any size, is not completely paved. The Pan American Highway, Central America's major road, bypasses Belize, leading straight from Mexico to Guatemala. "Belize is not on the way from anywhere to anywhere else," wrote Aldous Huxley 50 years ago. It is still true.

Transportation, Electrical Problems Because of the poor road system, Belize has tried to develop a series of air strips for basic travel. One of the two companies offering air service to them recently went bankrupt.

A $5 million loan from the Caribbean Development Bank enabled the government to construct a deep-water port near Belize City, but its 16-foot channel is too shallow for sugar barges, which carry out the country's main export. They continue to anchor one mile offshore.

"It's a bit of a white elephant," says George Fitch, the U.S. consul's economic officer.

Adding to the transportation problems are the almost daily electrical brownouts, a problematic wastewater system and a four-digit telephone system.

The government, which owns the utilities, is currently switching over to a five-digit system, but progress is so slow that it is often more practical to travel across town rather than await a telephone connection.

Many Health problems

Health care is even worse. "The No. 1 killer is gastroenteritis, believe it or not, or what we commonly call a stomach bug," said an American physician working with a California-based relief foundation. "The No. 2 killer is malaria."

This month Radio Belize began broadcasting warnings about a spreading wave of "pink eye," although the announcer did not say what those who wanted to avoid it should do. The announcer also advised people to gnaw nut in the streets and clean up the garbage.

"Let's get rid of those nasty rats and cockroaches that live in our garbage in time for independence day," the announcer advised.

Cultural amenities take a back seat when basic health is a problem. There are only a few small branch libraries and little else: the national stadium is a fenced-in cow pasture. Spectators stand.

Refugees to develop natural resources, United States attracts Belize natives

By Dial Torgerson

BELIZE CITY, Belize — In Belize, soon to be Central America's seventh independent country, the climate is hot and sultry and the people are friendly. And the mosquitoes love everybody. They rise in clouds from the swamps that surround Belize City (pop. 40,000), which is built on reclaimed marshland. Belize City is not a backwater, but a frontier town, situated on a poorly drained coast where sea, swamp and river merge amid the landfill.

But beyond the coastal marshes, beyond the reach of the country's few main roads, vast stands of hardwood timber and potential farm and grazing lands lie untouched by man.

When the little British colony on the Caribbean becomes independent Sept. 21, its government plans to open up the interior to refugees — Salvadorans, Guatemalans, Haitians, perhaps Vietnamese — willing to fight the jungle for the land underneath.

"We've already taken in 2,000 Salvadorans and 1,500 Guatemalans," said Deputy Prime Minister C.L.B. Rogers. "Everywhere else they put the refugees in camps. Not here. You'll see no camps in Belize. We absorbed them. We gave many of them farms. We think over 5 or 10 years we could absorb about 10,000 more."

Exodus to United States

One reason Belize can use new citizens is that so many Belizeans, perhaps as many as 40,000, have left the country in recent years to seek a better living. Most have gone to the United States. Another reason is that Belizeans show little interest in farming.

"Belize was settled for its timber," Rogers said. "In fact, at first agriculture was barred. The school system has been directed toward turning out white-collar workers and civil servants. Belizeans just don't want to go out and till the soil."

Salvadorans and Guatemalans, fleeing the hazards of insurgencies in their own countries, have made their way to Belize.

An Underpopulated area

The majority of Belize's 140,000 population are black and Latin, with white and East Indian minorities.

Prime Minister George is white, Rogers is black. English is the official language, but Spanish is spoken widely.

Unlike the other six Central American nations, Belize is underpopulated. El Salvador, for instance, has almost 5 million people in the same area. Only 15 percent of the arable land of Belize is now being farmed. Sugar cane and bananas are major crops.

Future Development Planned

After independence Belize expects to seek $200 million from donor nations and international agencies to build the roads and other developments needed to open up the interior. There are few roads now leading into the jungle. Britain, which took over Belize in 1862, spent little more than was needed to take out easily accessible hardwoods.

In an attempt to open up the interior, Belize has moved its capital inland the way Brazil created a new capital, Brasilia. The government, which once was centered here in Belize City, is now officially located at Belmopan in the higher, dryer interior 52 miles to the west.

The results are rich in hope but modest in achievement. When Belize becomes independent it will have one of the world's smallest capitals, with 4,000 people. Belmopan is a grassy clearing that holds a few modest government buildings and a few tracts of small, concrete homes for the capital's workers.

There are two restaurants, one a shedlike concrete block structure, the other a few tables ranged around a swimming pool which was, in July, bone dry. There is no hotel. But there are plans to build one with 20 rooms. There is a popular T-shirt here inscribed: "where is Belize?"

Belize City is still the center of commercial activity for the country, and the base of its fishing fleet. A 200-mile-long barrier reef — second only to the great barrier reef off Australia — lies offshore. Idyllic Caribbean islands, or cays, are scattered along the reef, awaiting development as tourist attractions.

Now there are only a few small hotels on the cays, and relatively few tourists. Belize city has only one decent hotel, but the city has a laid-back charm, with wood-frame, colonial-style homes often painted bright white with colorful trim. Some are not painted at all, and sag picturesquely.

Each morning and evening the swing bridge across the Belize Canal, which runs through the city, opens to let small craft in and out. At 6 p.m. Belizeans gather to watch while chattering children race back and forth along the moving span and diver into the muddy channel. Then a parade of boats chugs past.

It is the best show in Belize City, urban center of the newest nation to join the countries of the western hemisphere.

Stuart's late goal helps Timbers snatch advantage

PORTLAND, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Stuart Lee punched a three-meter shot past San Diego goalie Volkmar Gross with just under 15 minutes left Saturday night to give the Portland Timbers a 2-1 North American Soccer League victory. It was the first game of a best-of-three playoff. The second game will be played Wednesday night in San Diego.

Lee's goal came during a scramble in front of the net and capped a comeback for the Timbers, who had lost to the Sockers in two regular season games.

Steve Nesin gave San Diego a 1-0 lead at 41:14, with an assist from Gert Wiecezkowski. However, The 76,003 fans in Portland Civic Stadium watched Gross knock aside Portland shots until Ally Brown tied it, heading in a 13-meter shot on a pass from John Bain at 73:10.

In another match, Minnesota forward Ron Futcher scored two goals and assisted on a third as the Kicks beat the Roughnecks 3-1, in the playoffs Minnesota has the home field advantage in the rest of the best-of-three series.

The next game is Wednesday between the Kicks, who took second place in the Central Division with a 19-13 record, and the Tulsa Roughnecks, who earned the top playoff wildcard berth at 17-15.

Billy Caskey gave Tulsa the lead at 20:04 with an assist from Duncan McKenzie. But Futcher's goal just before halftime evened the score at 43:49.

Futcher scored an unassisted goal at 73:52 before assisting on a put away goal by Ricardo Alonso at 82:37.

Tulsa had 17 shots on goal to nine for Minnesota. Roughneck goalie Zeljko Bilecki had four saves while Tino Lettieri had five for the Kicks. Minnesota's victory marked the fourth Kicks win in five meetings between the teams this season.

In Valencia, Spain, a spark of brilliance from striker Diego Maradona led to the goal which gave World Soccer champions Argentina a 1-0 victory over Spain's Valencia as they opened a four-match European tour.

With 56 minutes gone and the encounter still goalless, Maradona picked up the ball in the middle of the field, forged past three Valencia defenders and threaded a pinpoint pass to Ramon Diaz who was left with the easy task of slotting the ball into an empty goal.

The narrow scoreline gave an inaccurate reflection of the superiority of the 1978 World Cup winners who coasted through the match all ways in command.

Although Valencia tried to exert pressure on the Argentine defence, their attacks lacked penetration and after Diaz's goal the Spanish team seemed to lose heart.

The visiting champions always looked as if they were capable of increasing their lead and Valencia goalkeeper Sempere was kept busy with some sharp Argentine shooting in the last 20 minutes.

At times the Latin Americans seemed reluctant to display the dazzling skills they possess, their workmanlike approach was offset by the presence of the 19-year-old Maradona, whose every touch of the ball appeared to electrify crowd in the Valencia Stadium and unsettle his Spanish opponents.

PELE KICKS OFF A NEW CAREER: Top Brazilian footballer Pele, is aiming for a very different type of goal in his new role as an actor. He stars in a film titled "Escape to Victory". Pele plays an allied Prisoner of War forced to play soccer against the Nazi war machine. The soccer star retired in 1977, but "Escape to Victory" brings him back as he scores the winning goal for the Allies in the climax of the film.

East German quartet excels

UTRECHT, Netherlands, Aug. 23 (AFP) — East Germany set a world best performance in the women's 4x100 meters at the European Junior Athletics Championships here Sunday.

The team of Silke Gladisch, Sabine Rieger, Kathrin Bohme and Carola Beuster won the event in 43.77 seconds. The previous world best performance of 43.95 seconds has been held by East Germany since 1979.

Earlier yesterday, British youth claimed two of the seven finals.

Paul Davies-Hale improved his personal record in the Men's 2,008 meters steep-chase when he powered through the event in 5:31.12, a full seven seconds ahead of East Germany's Gilbert Juchert.

The young Davies-Hale, who placed fifth in the World Cross Country Championships last week.

Finnish rider killed

ADENAU, Rhenania-Palatinate, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Finnish motorcyclist Jormo Nevala was killed here today following a pile-up of ten riders shortly after the start of the West German 350 cc Championship.

Seven other competitors, several of them seriously injured, were taken to hospital after the accident.

Ed Moses pulls out

COLOGNE, Aug. 23 (AFP) — World 400 meters record holder Ed Moses of America pulled out of the International Athletics meeting here Sunday because of a torn thigh muscle.

In Madrid last March, attacked the course aggressively in imitation of his idol, Filbert Bayi of Tanzania.

Another Briton, Todd Bennet, halted East Germany's steamroller march through the championships, winning the men's 400 meters final ahead of East German Jennis Carlowitz.

Powerful Hungarian runner Gabor Kszabo burst from the field after two kms to win the men's 5,000 meters race ahead of Salvatore Antibo of Italy. The dark-skinned Kszabo has done well in recent 1,500 and 3,000 meters European events.

World record holder Antoaneta Todorova of Bulgaria had it easy winning the women's javelin event with a toss of 64.12 meters. She set the world mark of 71.88 meters during the European Cup finals in Zagreb, Yugoslavia, last week.

Conz wins marathon

OTTAWA, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Nancy Conz, 24, of the United States today won the first women's Olympic Marathon here ahead of four fellow Americans.

Conz and her compatriots all came in under 2 hours 40 minutes. Second place went to Joan Benoit who was followed by Julie Isphording, Kiki Swiegart and Lairde Wald.

Fastest European was Midfe Hamran of Sweden who finished sixth ahead of Carol Gtild of Britain.

Conz's win here Sunday confirmed her success last year in London when she finished second behind Lorraine Moller of New Zealand who did not run here.

U.S. swimmers top Beardsley shatters own world butterfly record

KIEV, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The United States beat the Soviet Union by 203 points to 141 on the third day of the dual swimming meet here Sunday.

The highlight on the final day was the setting up of a new European record in the men's 4x100 meters medley. The credit going to the Soviet team of Viktor Kuznetsov, Yuri Kys, Valdimir Dombrovsky and Sergey Krasuyk, who clocked 3:44.79 seconds. The previous record of 3:45.92 was held by the Soviets set in July last year.

But the star of the three-day championship, however, was American Craig Beardsley, who improved upon his own world mark in the 200 meters butterfly on Saturday.

World record holder, Mary Meagher, who on Saturday won the 100 meters butterfly, won the 200 meters too. On Sunday, she clocked 2:09.80 seconds to finish ahead of another American Mayumi Hokoyama, who clocked 2:15.34 seconds. Russians Natalya Pokas and Olga Chudakova finished third and fourth respectively.

The U.S. one-two finish, was seen in the men's 200 meters freestyle too, with David Larson and Doug Towne placing first and second, followed by Sergi Kopylov and Sergei Krasuyk of the Soviet Union.

The women's 400 meters freestyle was claimed by Marybeth Lizmaier and Tiffany Cohen of the U.S. Russians, Irina Laricheva and Karin Laberge took the third and fourth places.

On Saturday, Craig Beardsley of the United States smashed his own world record in the men's 200-meter butterfly. Beardsley, 20, clocked 1:58.01 to better his old mark by two-tenths of a second set last year.

Beardsley led Soviet swimmer Sergei Fesenko by half a body length going into the last lap and then turned on the power to win by about five meters. Teammate Jeff Float came up to pass Fesenko on the last stroke for a one-two U.S. finish. His time was 2:00.34.

Fesenko and teammate Sergei Karataev were third and fourth, respectively in the race at the outdoor Dynamo Pool in warm, sunny, evening weather.

The world record came at the start of the second day of competition and was the sixth victory in a row for the American men against their Soviet rivals.

The American women also got off to a flying start when Cynthia Woodhead, the world record-holder, won the women's 200-meter freestyle in 1:58.65, about four-tenths of a second off her own world mark. The 17-year-old from California had won the women's 200-meter individual medley on Friday, Marybeth Lizmaier was runner-up in the freestyle event with a time of 2:02.47.

The American women won four of five races on opening day as the team opened up a 79-41 lead after the first day of competition. The sweeps in the first two events Saturday had increased the American lead to 95-47.

World record holder Mary Meagher chalked up another victory for the American women in the 100 meters butterfly. As Americans finished the second day with 139 points to 85 for the Russians.

However, the Soviets captured three of the day's nine finals, thanks to Salmikov, who took the men's 1,500 meter, Vladimir Emetov, who won the men's 100 meter backstroke, and Larisa Gorchakova who powered her first in the women's 200 meters backstroke.

Beardsley, a 5-foot-11, 160-pounder, said he was "A little surprised" by his world record. "I didn't think I could do it since we had the National Championships last week. I wasn't over-rested. But it was really the first time this summer that my stroke was really good," he said.

Beardsley said that when he finished the race "I knew I was close to the world record. I felt the whole race went really smoothly."

Up the tree all for a stroke!

TOKYO, Aug. 23 (AP) — Bernard Langer, German golf star, climbed a tree and hit his ball out of the branches Saturday for the most bizarre stroke of the $175,000 Benson and Hedges International Golf Tournament.

The daredevil feat at the 17th hole of the par 72 Fulford course helped him to third place behind Eamonn Darcy of Ireland and Tom Weiskopf of the United States after three rounds of the event.

Langer's third shot at the 17th went into an old ash tree beside the green. The ball lodged in the branches 15 feet from the ground. Spectators helped the German to get up on the lower branch to survey the prospects, then he climbed up further, held precariously and hit the ball out on to the green. He two-putted for a bogey five.

"I would do exactly the same again," Langer said. "I could have dropped the ball under penalty, but it might easily have rolled close to the tree or behind it. I decided to climb up and go for a four."

Langer is not the first golfer to play a shot out of a tree. Arnold Palmer clambered into a eucalyptus tree and knocked his ball out with a one-iron during the Hills Masters at Melbourne, in 1964.

Weiskopf holed from 238 yards with a one-iron for an eagle two at the 11th. The 38-year-old American said it was the longest shot he had ever holed in his career.

Phillies trounce Astros

NEW YORK, Aug. 23 — Keith Moreland, who is challenging Bob Boone as first-string catcher with the Phillies, hit a pair of solo home runs and Manny Trillo and Mike Schmidt each had two-run shots Saturday as Philadelphia beat the Houston Astros 8-4.

Dick Ruthven, 9-5, who had lost his only two starts in the second season, pitched 62-3 innings and gave up all of Houston's runs. Sparky Lyle finished up for the Phillies.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second when Moreland unloaded his fourth homer of the season. In the third Bake McBride's RBI single and Gary Matthews sacrifice fly made it 3-0 against Astros' loser Joe Niekro, 7-7.

In another National League day game, Larry Radons singles drove in the winning run and Jack Clark homered and scored twice as the San Francisco Giants edged the Chicago Cubs 2-1.

In the American League, Beritt Burns threw a four-hitter and Greg Luzinski and Chet Lemon hit solo home runs as the Chicago White Sox blanked Toronto 8-0. Three Yankee pitchers Rick Reuschel, Rudy and George Frazier combined to blank Kansas City 5-0 as Bucky Dent hit a two-run homer.

Detroit got the same kind of pitching as Dan Petry, Dave Rozema and Kevin Saucier teamed to blank Texas 2-0 for the Tigers eighth win in a row. And Rick Langford hurled his major-league leading 13th complete game, handcuffing Baltimore on five hits as Oakland used Tony Armas two-run homer to beat the Orioles 2-0.

In NL night action, Milner keyed a five-run sixth inning with a three-run homer to lead the Montreal Expos to a 5-4 decision over the Atlanta Braves in the first game of a doubleheader.

The Braves came back to win the second game 9-1 as Clausil Washington and Chris Chambliss each belted two-run homers in a five-run, sixth-inning outburst.

Pinch-hitter Broderick Perkins drove in three runs with a bases-loaded double in the eighth inning and Ozzie Smith followed with a game-winning triple to give the San Diego Padres a 7-4 comeback victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Dave Kingman smashed a grand slam home run in the eighth inning, sending the New York Mets to a 7-4 victory over the Cincinnati Red.

Chris Lewis rallies from brink of defeat

MASON, Ohio, Aug. 23 (AP) — New Zealand's Chris Lewis scored an upset 6-7, 7-6, 6-3 win over veteran Stan Smith, the 16th seed in the semifinals of the Association of Tennis Professional Championship, Saturday.

In the final Sunday, Lewis will play top-seeded John McEnroe, who defeated Raul Ramirez 7-6, 6-1 at the Jack Nicklaus Sports Center at Kings Island.

"It will be the biggest match of my life Sunday — undoubtedly — whether I win or lose," said Lewis, who is ranked 70th in the world and has never reached the final of a tournament this large. He upset 11th seed John Sabri of North Carolina in the first round.

Smith won the first-set tiebreaker easily, 7-3. In the second set, he was up 5-4, 4-0 on Lewis' serve, holding triple match point. But Lewis won the next five points to even the score.

Smith's other two match points came in the second-set tiebreaker. At 7-6, he hit a service return long. At 8-7, he double faulted. Lewis took the tiebreaker 10-8.

"I tried to hang in there and I thought I did pretty well," Smith said. "I broke him and broke him again (in the third set), but unfortunately, that wasn't enough."

Each time Smith broke Lewis, the scrappy and scrambling right-hander broke back. He scored the decisive break in the eighth game and served out for the match.

"I won quite a few matches coming from behind, mainly because I'm in good shape," Lewis said. "I've got confidence to go the distance. I'm not afraid to play three long sets to win."

Ramirez broke McEnroe's serve twice early in the first set and jumped to a 4-1 lead. "I was worried because I wasn't playing well," McEnroe said. "If he was going to beat me, I was going to make him work for it, not give it to him."

McEnroe got his serve working, started moving better and evened the set at 6-6, forcing a tiebreaker that he won 9-7.

Ramirez only gain in the second set came on the service break of McEnroe in the second game. After that break, Ramirez scored only one point off McEnroe's serve.

Meanwhile, third-seeded Mel Purcell upset No. 1 seed Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 6-7, 7-5 to advance to the final of the $75,000 Atlanta Journal-Constitution Open.

In the other semifinal match Saturday, No. 2 Buhening beat unseeded Gilles Morreton of France 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.

Teltscher, a 22-year-old held a 4-1 lead as he prepared to serve in the sixth game on the third set. But Purcell, 22, of Murray, Kentucky, won six of the next seven games to beat Teltscher, who had aggravated a groin pull during the match.

Purcell said of his come-from behind victory, "I never think I'm gone. The crowd was pulling for me and helped me get back into it."

Purcell, who won the NCAA doubles last year with Tennessee teammate Rodney Hammon, plays Buhening in the final round Sunday.

Irwin overtakes Halldorson

GRAND BLANC, Michigan, Aug. 23 (AP) — Two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin held off current British Open Champion Bill Rogers take a 1-stroke lead into the final round of the $350,000 Buick Open.

Irwin, who started Saturday's third round at 6-under 138, four strokes behind leader Dan Halldorson, shot a 5-under 67 over the 7,001-yard, par-72 layout at Warwick Hills.

Irwin's key hole was the 185-yard, par-3 17th, where the former Colorado football defender hit a 4-iron to within 25 feet (8 meters) of the hole and then rolled in his putt to go 11-under for the tournament which will pay $63,000 to the winner.

Rogers began the third round even further back at 4-under 140 — six strokes off the pace. However, he made the turn in 2-under, then ran off a string of three successive birdies on 11, 12 and 13 and then birdied the par-5 16th.

The key to Rogers' success was the fact that the 29-year-old Texan was able to birdie three of the four par-3 holes, rolling in a 12-foot (4-meter) putt at No. 3, a 15-footer (5-meter) at eight and a 35-foot birdie putt at 11.

Halldorson, the Canadian pro from Winnipeg, Manitoba, shot a over par 75 Saturday to drop five strokes behind the leader.

Grouped at 209 with Halldorson were Gil Morgan, Dave Hill, Allen Miller, Dan Pohl and Tom Jenkins.

In Colorado Springs, ED Hopkins shot a 36-hole 136 net score to pace the United States to victory Saturday in the 19th annual Francis Brown Senior International team matches at the Broadmoor Golf Club.

The U.S. team won with a 420 score drawn from the best three players scores on the 4-man team. It was the first U.S. victory in the event in four years.

Defending champion Panama was 18 strokes back at 438, followed by Canada at 439, China and Australia tied for fourth at 440 and Japan and Sweden each finished at 441 in a tie for sixth.

Individual scores in the team play were used as qualifying for the 22nd annual World Senior Golf Championships beginning next Monday.

Medalist was William Trombley, 59, of Dallas, who shot a 70-72-142, second was Johnny Andersson, 59, of Landskrona, Sweden, with a 68-75-143. Hopkins, of Whitney, Texas was third at 72-74-146.

Meanwhile, Torbjorn Atevik, a 20-year-old Swedish golfer, completed a hat-trick of wins for European golfers in important British Amateur Tournaments this season when he won the British Youths Open Amateur Championship on the West Lancashire course near Manchester Saturday.

The Swede shot a final round of 71, following his previous scores of 73, 71 and 75, for two-over-par total of 290.

David Gower, following the ball

Graham Gooch, standing put at the crease

From England's squad Gooch, Gower dropped

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Graham Gooch and David Gower are axed from the England side to play Australia in the sixth Corahill Test at the Oval on Thursday. They are replaced by Wayne Larkins and Paul Parker, who wins his test cap.

These two changes in the batting might also be followed by a bowling switch. Pacesman Chris Old has recovered from the knee injury that forced him to miss the Old Trafford Test and is back in the squad in place of spinner Derek Underwood, who was 12th man at Manchester.

Old looks sure to play, with the 12th man spot being filled by Paul Allott, who had a successful debut as a late deputy for Old.

Parker, born in Zimbabwe, has been near the Test team at least twice within the last three seasons. He is a fluent, but determined batsman and a lightning fast runner between wickets.

More importantly, he is the highest Englishman in the averages. His style has always impressed the selectors and he has produced the runs that Alec Bedser, whose last Test as chairman of the panel this is, always demands.

Parker was almost a double blue at Cambridge missing the university rugby match in 1977, only through injury. He is a brilliant fielder and England will hardly miss Gower's speed and dexterity.

Larkins has played five Tests with his highest score only 33, but he batted to his limit against the fiery West Indies bowlers in three Tests last summer.

Certainly scoring well his ability has never been questioned, but doubts linger about his temperament. He has a chance to eliminate those doubts now.

Gooch vanishes after 18 successive Tests during which he has batted with decreasing conviction. An attempt to find a new slot down the order in the fourth Test this summer did not work. He will be back so will Gower. Like Gooch he has travelled up and down the order — and that is as sure a sign that a player is on the way out as a football manager being publicly given 100 percent backing by his chairman.

Meanwhile, advance ticket sales for the Test starting at the Oval here next Thursday, have broken the previous ground record of 109,000 pounds.

Surety secretary Ian Scott-Browne said Friday: "We have already taken more than 125,000 pounds and we anticipate sales of around 160,000 pounds by Thursday."

Tickets are still available for all days, either by post or in person. There is no Sunday play in this final Test of the six-match series, already won by England.

The England 12: J.M. Brearley (Middlesex, captain) Tests 38, age 39. G. Boycott (Yorkshire) 103, 40; W. Larkins (Northamptonshire) 5, 28; C.J. Tavar (Kent) 3, 26; P.W.G. Parker (Sussex) 0, 25; M.W. Gatting (Middlesex) 13, 24; I.T. Botham (Somerset) 40, 25; A.P.E. Knott (Kent) 94, 35; J.E. Emburey (Middlesex) 17, 29; C.M. Old (Yorkshire) 46, 32; R.G.D. Willis (Warwickshire) 62, 32; P.J.W. Allott (Lancashire) 1, 24.

This deal occurred during the 1972 Vanderbilt in the highly-touted match between the Precision Team and the Dallas Aces. It is presented here not as a model of excellence, but rather to show that even the expert sometimes has feet of clay.

The Precision Team won the match, though they lost heavily on this hand. When they held the North-South cards, the bidding went as shown. Three notrump indicated a five diamonds.

To avoid trouble

Moscow tells allies to toe Marxist line

MOSCOW, Aug. 23 (R) — The Soviet Union has told its East bloc allies that strict adherence to Moscow-style Marxism and tight internal control are required to prevent troubles like those of Poland affecting their countries.

The message was set out clearly in a report by the Soviet Politburo, the Communist Party's "inner cabinet," on a round of meetings between Kremlin chief Leonid Brezhnev and seven allied party leaders.

The report, front-paged by Soviet newspapers Sunday, formally expressed approval of Brezhnev's talks and indicated that the Polish crisis had figured prominently in them. Brezhnev met the leaders of East Germany, Hungary, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Mongolia, as well as Polish party chief Stanislaw Kania, during the past month at his holiday retreat near Yalta.

The report said Poland was confronted with "acute crisis phenomena" and the Polish troubles were impeding the advancement of socialism in general. The report was clearly intended to get across to other Soviet bloc countries what course they should follow to avoid any outbreak of similar troubles inside their countries.

The wording of the report indicated that Moscow feels Poland's problems could have been avoided if there had been closer links between the party and Poles and if authorities had moved quickly against the Solidarity free trade union in the days of its infancy. The Soviet leadership was also apparently telling its allies that they should not run up a debt with the West like the $27 billion owed by Poland.

After Brezhnev's informal summit with Kania and Polish Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski on Aug. 14, the Kremlin announced it would postpone repayment until 1986 of more than $4 billion in credits it is owed by Poland. But a carefully-worded official report of the talks indicated that Moscow was still withholding judgment on the political course taken by the Warsaw leadership.

The Politburo, a 14-man body, appears to have drawn up its report without Brezhnev taking part in its meeting. The 74-year-old Kremlin chief is still holidaying in the Crimea. The Politburo statement indicated that the Polish crisis and the current poor state of East-West relations had made Brezhnev's Crimean talks this year more important than those of previous years.

The Soviet leadership attacked Western powers, particularly the United States, for, it said, trying to bring pressure to bear on Socialist countries by heightening international tension.

Bid to oust manager

Tension rises at Polish mill

WARSAW, Aug. 23 (R) — Polish Communist authorities met Sunday to thwart plans by the Solidarity trade union to hold a referendum on a call to sack the boss of the Huta Katowice steel mill.

Solidarity activists at the mill announced the referendum at a rally there Friday to protest against the manager's refusal to reopen the union's printing press there. Solidarity said 4,000 workers took part in the rally and it said later it was drawing up ballot papers for the referendum to be held Monday or Tuesday.

But the Huta Katowice section of pro-government branch union denounced the referendum and called for its boycott. The union's statement published by the official news agency PAP said Solidarity radicals had placed a wheelbarrow outside the management office.

Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski said in a televised speech last week that his government would not allow managers to be returned from their plants "in wheelbarrows." The prime minister defended the closure of the Huta Katowice Solidarity bulletin, which was accused of publishing anti-state and anti-Soviet material, and said he would support similar moves elsewhere.

Manager Stanislaw Bednarczyk's refusal to allow the bulletin to publish again triggered the demands for his resignation. Solidarity said it also sought his dismissal because of alleged failure by management to settle other grievances.

A statement issued by a Solidarity committee, in the central city of Plock Saturday condemned the closure of Huta Katowice bulletin Wolny Zwiastowiec (free Unionist), as a breach of last summer's labor accords.

"Wolny Zwiastowiec cannot be blamed for anti-Sovietism. The responsibility for this lies in the USSR because these are the results of its policies," the self-styled Plock Solidarity Committee for the Defense of Prisoners of Conscience said.

Meanwhile, printers in the northern city of Olsztyn said Sunday they were continuing a five-day-old strike by refusing to publish the local party newspaper. A move by the local authorities to settle the dispute, which arose from a report on state television which claimed that Solidarity printers used physical force to prevent members of unions from working during a national strike last week, came to nothing Saturday, they said.

Solidarity chief spokesman Janusz Onyszkiewicz said he hoped talks between the union and the government on the mass media issue would resume in Warsaw in midweek.

Plane, passengers returned

W. Germany to try Polish hijacker

BERLIN, Aug. 23 (Agencies) — Jerzy Dygas, a 25-year-old Pole, was Sunday charged with compromising air safety by hijacking a Polish plane in West Berlin Saturday, judicial sources said here.

The hijacker, who surrendered to authorities immediately after the Antonov-24 jetliner landed at the Tempelhof U.S. military airport, is to be tried by a West German court. He could face a nine to five-year prison sentence. The hijacker, who seized another Polish plane in December 1980, Andrzej Perka, was sentenced to a four-year prison term by a West German court.

Jerzy Dygas, said to have been a messenger for the independent trade union Solidarity, was quoted by police as saying he forced the airliner to the West because he was dissatisfied with political and economic conditions at home.

Police said Dygas told them that in 1979, he planned to hijack a plane from Hungary to Yugoslavia but was arrested before the operation could take place. After that, he said,

Polish authorities imposed a five-year foreign travel ban, leaving him no alternative but to attempt an escape.

Dygas, who was armed with a World War II hand grenade, surrendered to U.S. military officials and freed the other 34 passengers and four crew members after the plane landed at Tempelhof.

Despite a request by Polish officials for his extradition, Dygas was handed over later Saturday to German authorities for prosecution.

The plane, hijacked on a flight from Wroclaw to Warsaw, returned to Poland about six hours later. Two of the passengers, both men aged 19 and 22, asked for political asylum and remained in the West.

Polish television said the hijacker smuggled the grenade aboard in a transistor radio. U.S. officials said the grenade could not have exploded because the detonator had been removed. The hijacking was the second in West Berlin in the last five weeks involving a Polish domestic flight.

GISCARD DEFACED: Posters of former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing on a Paris wall are defaced with the word "Bokassa" and drawings of diamonds, reviving the controversy over the gift of diamonds and other articles ex-Emperor Bokassa of the Central African Republic gave to Giscard d'Estaing. Bokassa, who fell from power in a 1979 coup supported by the French, said recently that he was proud that his gift contributed to Giscard d'Estaing's fall in this year's presidential elections.

Obstacles to migration

Volga Germans frustrated

MOSCOW, Aug. 23 (AFP) — The Soviet Union has by no means settled the thirty-year-old problem of a two-million strong German minority — many of them "Volga Deutschi" — who want desperately to return to the land of their ancestors.

The problem was highlighted last week when a Soviet court sentenced a Soviet national of German origin, Arthur Marshall, to two-and-a-half years in a labor camp because he wanted to emigrate to West Germany.

Many "Volga Deutschi" here are descendants of the German settlers brought to Russia by Catherine the Great and usually referred to as the "Volga Germans". Others are the original inhabitants of Prussia seized by the Soviet Union in 1945, like the region around Koenigsberg, renamed Kaliningrad. The majority of them continue to speak German.

Up to 1941 the Soviet Union had an autonomous republic of Germans in the Volga region, but Stalin dissolved this at the time of the Nazi invasion on the grounds that the population were security risks. They were forcibly sent to Soviet central Asia.

The refusal by the Soviet government to re-establish a "Volga republic" has driven some of the "Volga Deutschi" to demand the right to emigrate. At the beginning of the seventies, about 7,000-8,000 of them were allowed to emigrate every year.

But for the period 1980-81, hardly more than 4,000 exit visas were granted, according to well-informed German sources here. The sources said that about 300,000 of them wanted to emigrate. The 1972 treaty of Moscow signed between West Germany and the Soviet Union laid down provisions under which Germans here could emigrate in order to join their family.

Despite a certain measure of success by the Bonn government, would-be emigrants have been facing more and more obstacles in recent years. And discontent amongst the Germans here has been shown in various ways.

Some Germans, tired of waiting for permission that never came, have publicly rejected their Soviet nationality. Some have refused to do their military service to show that they are no longer Soviet citizens. One desperate group tried to seek refuge in the West German Embassy in May, 1977.

The Soviet authorities are constantly warning these Germans against emigrating. The weekly Ogoniok recently described life in West Germany as: "The debauchery of Sodom and Gomorrah — with thefts, crimes and rape." Another weekly pointed out that increasing numbers of West Germans were fleeing from their own country in fear of a third world war.

The Soviet authorities, in a bid to put a brake to this German wave of would-be emigrants, could restore a territory to the community. There are persistent rumors here that the Kremlin is envisaging such a solution by forming an autonomous German region in Kazakhstan, not far from the Chinese border.

This project, which has never been officially mentioned, might well cause a lot of opposition in Kazakhstan, according to disaffected circles here and would still not solve the German minority problem.

Irish MP seeks talks with Thatcher on Maze

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AFP) — Owen Carron, Northern Ireland's newly-elected Republican member of the British Parliament, said Sunday he will formally request Monday talks with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on the Maze Prison hunger strike.

Unemployed teacher Carron (28), who was elected Thursday as MP for Fermanagh and South Tyrone, said in a BBC interview: "My election has given an opportunity to the British government to solve the H-block issue without a loss of face."

The voters had, he said, proved their wish to see the problem resolved, by democratically appointing a spokesman to press the claims of the Republican prisoners. "The government has an obligation to meet me on this," he added. Official circles here believed that government members, and probably Mrs. Thatcher herself, have no objection to meeting Carron.

Carron justified his decision not to take his place in the House of Commons or to take the oath, by saying it would serve no useful purpose. He said: "The British government and the people in the House of Commons allowed the last MP Bobby Sands, to die of hunger. They could have saved his life, but they refused to do so." Carron was the election agent of Bobby Sands, the first hunger striker to die.

Carron said he would highlight the H-block protest at home and throughout the world, and there was no need to go to the House of Commons to do so.

Northern Ireland Unionist (Protestant) political leaders were Sunday looking at possible ways of seeking the annulment of Carron's victory over official Unionist candidate Ken Maginnis by a majority of 2,230 votes. Maginnis and Harold McCusker, a Unionist MP for Ulster, said many people from outside the constituency voted fraudulently in the election.

Amaral to join Balsemao

LISBON, Aug. 23 (R) — Christian Democratic (CDS) leader Diogo Freitas do Amaral has agreed to join a new government to be formed by outgoing Prime Minister Francisco Pinto Balsemao. The CDS leader announced his decision Saturday night following an invitation from Pinto Balsemao to become deputy prime minister.

He had refused to join the Social Democratic Party (PSD) leader's first government last January despite his party's involvement and was a persistent critic of its middle-of-the-road policies. Pinto Balsemao resigned on Aug. 10 after only seven months in office in the face of mounting criticism from the right-wing of his party and the conservative CDS.

He agreed to resume office last Thursday after no alternative leader emerged in the PSD, the senior partner in the ruling center-right alliance of Social Democrats, Christian Democrats and Monarchists (PPM).

President Antonio Ramalho Eanes Monday formally coopts government and opposition parties on naming the new prime minister and is expected to call on Pinto Balsemao to form a new government. Pinto Balsemao's Democratic Alliance holds an 18-seat majority in parliament and PSD sources said negotiations to form a new cabinet were almost complete.

The sources said Pinto Balsemao had conceded the Christian Democrats a stronger presence in the cabinet and a swing to the right in economic policy in return for their commitment to back the new administration fully.

Cheysson begins talks in Delhi

NEW DELHI, Aug. 23 (AP) — The foreign ministers of France and India, opening two days of political and economic talks, agreed Sunday that problems such as Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the Iraq-Iran war cannot be solved by imposing preconditions, an Indian spokesman said Sunday.

Claude Cheysson and P.V. Narasimha Reddy also agreed during a meeting of more than three hours that the approach to settling current international conflicts must be political rather than military, spokesman J.N. Dixit told reporters.

Cheysson's reported opposition to preconditions on Afghanistan confirmed that France disagrees with those countries who insist as a first step on a pullout of the more than 85,000 Soviet troops in the South Asian country.

Cheysson, launching a major effort by French President Francois Mitterrand's new government to strengthen relations with Third World countries, went into detail about France's announced determination to use this process to "bring about a quantitative change in the world economic and political situation," Dixit said.

The two leaders discussed potential Franco-Indian cooperation in international forums.

Uganda signs military pact

DAR ES SALAAM, Aug. 23 (R) — Uganda and Tanzania have signed an agreement believed to provide for military cooperation, Tanzania's official Swahili-language Sunday newspaper Mwanando reported.

It said officials from both sides refused to give details of the agreement, which follows the visit to Dar Es Salaam by the Ugandan vice president and defense minister, Paulo Muwanga, and chief of defense forces Maj. Gen. Tito Okello. Muwanga said recently that Uganda wanted at least 800 Tanzanian soldiers to help train the Ugandan Army. He said that agreements had been reached to send 200 Ugandan officers for training in Kenya, 200 to the Sudan and 80 to Egypt.

Tanzania had 45,000 troops in Uganda when it helped oust President Idi Amin in 1979. Most have been withdrawn with the expiry of a two-year defense agreement but a training mission of several hundred soldiers as well as 1,000 policemen are still in Uganda.

Mwanando said the military cooperation agreement was signed Saturday by Muwanga and the Tanzanian defense minister, Lt. Gen. Abdallah Twalipo. The Ugandans were expected to leave for home.

Weinberger trip ends

LONDON, Aug. 23 (AFP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger left here Sunday following a three-day visit here during which he held talks on NATO with his British opposite number John Nott. Before leaving, Weinberger said there had been no discussion on the question of stationing the enhanced-radiation weapon, known as the neutron bomb, in Europe.
